THE DOCTORS.

Last Day of the Session of the American Medical Association.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—At to-day's session of the medical association Dr. Dalton Jr. of New York, from the committee on experimental medicine, reported a resolution empowering the committee to add to its number by the election of associate members from different states, and setting forth that in view of attempts which have been made to obstruct by restrictive legislation the progress of experimental medicine this association desires to express its earnest conviction that experiments on animals is one of the most useful sources of knowledge in medical science, and that its restriction would retard the advancement of medical knowledge. This report was adopted.

Dr. Pratt offered a resolution urging the importance of legislation regulating emigration so as to exclude the so-called defective class. He said it was well known that a large proportion of the paupers and insane in this country came from foreign countries, and the resolution aimed to remedy this evil. The resolution was adopted.

The regular order of business was then resumed, and Dr. D. J. Roberts of Tennessee delivered an address in the course of which he advocated the establishment of a department of health, with a chief who would be a member of the president's cabinet, with the position and powers of other cabinet officers.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

Dr. Roberts of Tennessee offered a resolution urging upon congress the importance of placing the National Museum of Hygiene in this city upon a permanent basis and providing for it a permanent building. The resolution was adopted.

A resolution was adopted recommending state associations to endeavor to secure uniformity in legislative enactments by securing the passage of a law requiring those who practice medicine to have a knowledge of a certain line of studies specified.

Dr. Green of New York offered a resolution urging congress to issue a uniform edition of a medical and surgical history of the war of the rebellion, as the present edition is exhausted and a large number of doctors have not been able to obtain this valuable work. Adopted.

Dr. Beal of Ohio presented a resolution which stated that it was important that steps should be taken this session of congress to exterminate the disease among animals known as pleuro pneumonia. Adopted.

PROMPTLY TABLED.

Dr. Campbell of Georgia, president-elect, was introduced to the association and addressed it.

Dr. von Klein of Ohio offered a resolution, which stated that as many members of the association were [illegible] free thinkers, materialists, etc., that the custom of opening the session of the annual meeting with prayer was an imposition to many members, and that therefore it be abolished.

"I move that the resolution be laid on the table," promptly called out a delegate.

The vote was put and carried without a dissenting voice.

As an additional mark of respect to Dr. Gross, it was decided to issue the next Journal in mourning.

Dr. [illegible] suggested that the association signalize its meeting in Washington by erecting a statue to Dr. Rush, who was a member of the continental congress and intimately associated with the early history of this country. There was no statue to a doctor in this city, and he thought it fitting that a memorial to some member of the profession should have a place here. He asked that a committee of seven be appointed to take this matter under consideration, and the president will announce the committee.

After a general resolution of thanks to all those who had contributed to the entertainment of the members had been adopted, the association adjourned sine die.

THE OUTLOOK IN THE HOUSE.

Policy of the Revenue Reformers—But Little Business to be Transacted.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—[Special.]—Morrison and Blackburn, representing the revenue reformers in the house, say that no tariff legislation will be reported from the ways and means committee this session. Next Monday quite a number of bills affecting the tariff will be introduced, but none of them will be reported back for congressional action. [illegible] threat of the revenue reformers to punish the protectionist democrats in the democratic national convention by forcing them to take tariff reform to the party [illegible] a form will be carried out. As the last two presidential campaigns have been fought by the democrats on a platform of a tariff for revenue only, it is difficult to see to what greater length of revenue reform the party can go. Blackburn says that the friends of revenue reform will now do all in their power to fill up the surplus in the treasury. He avers that the educational bill, which proposes to distribute $70,000,000 among the states, will not pass; that the public buildings bills will be defeated, and that the people must endure the burdens of taxation without compensation in the form of appropriations for internal improvements. He does not say, however, that the river and harbor appropriation bill will be defeated, because he doubtless knows that a combination has been formed to vote about $12,600,140 for work on the navigable streams of the country.

Randall failed yesterday in his attempt to induce the house to consider the general appropriation bills. Major Burke, of the New Orleans Times-Democrat, had so thoroughly worked up the sentiment in favor of a million appropriation for the New Orleans exposition that the majority laid aside the library and land grant bills and considered the measure granting a loan to the enterprising managers of the exposition.

RANDALL WANTS AN EARLY ADJOURNMENT.

The appropriation bills have been delayed by the tariff debate, and Randall is very anxious that they be pushed through both houses as rapidly as possible. Thus far but one of the fourteen appropriation bills (the military academy) has become a law. The army and the consular and diplomatic bills have been reported to the house. The pension bill has passed the house, and awaits the action of the senate committee on appropriations. The Indian and agricultural bills are before the senate. The post-office and naval bills are in conference. The District of Columbia appropriation bill was reported some time ago and recommitted, and the harbor and river bill is perfected, but not yet reported to the house. The calendars of both houses contain many important public measures that have not nor cannot be acted upon this session. There are over 200 bills on the speaker's table, many of them of great importance, that will not be reached unless the session is prolonged far into August. It is taken for granted that besides the regular appropriation bills measures will be passed by the house to forfeit certain unearned railroad land grants. It is hoped that the bankruptcy and national bank relief bills will be adopted. The new library building is provided for, and supplemental legislation for the suppression of polygamy in Utah has been enacted. Beyond the passage of these and a few other bills of importance it is doubtful if the house will do anything more this session. There will be a bitter struggle between the houses over the appropriations and Randall wishes to adjourn as soon after the appropriations are made as possible.

THE JEANNETTE INQUIRY.

Mrs. DeLong takes the Witness Stand—The Taking of Testimony Closed.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Before the Jeannette committee the cross-examination of Dr. Collins was continued. He reaffirmed the statement that Lieutenant Lemly had told him he would object to any question before the court of inquiry which might reflect on a dead man. He also reaffirmed his statement that Lieutenant Lemly had told him it was Secretary Chandler's wish that the investigation be hushed up, and also stated that he was told the charges against his brother would not be presented to the court of inquiry unless he persisted in his course. Evidence of witness gave of a conversation he had with Newcomb was also reiterated, and he declared he believed Newcomb had willfully misstated their conversation.

MRS. DELONG ON THE STAND.

Mrs. Emma DeLong, widow of Captain DeLong, testified that her husband studied the provision lists of other Arctic explorers before selecting provisions for the Jeannette and endeavored to procure the best. His idea was that the officers and men should fare alike. The route of the expedition was chosen by Bennett after consultation with Doctor Petermann. Witness thought the ship was as carefully and completely furnished with clothing and provisions as possible. She felt perfectly satisfied that everything was done for the relief of her husband that could be done. She had a conversation with Bennett about the expedition the day Danenhower reached New York. Bennett told her he had heard very strict discipline was enforced on the Jeannette, but that he wanted the expedition to be strictly a military one. He also said that some criticisms had been made on Captain DeLong for stopping on his way to the Siberian coast, for the purpose of exploring Bennett island, but that DeLong would not have been the man he (Bennett) took him for if he had passed by any undiscovered land without examining it. In conclusion, Bennett said he considered the cause of DeLong's death a most heroic thing.

This closed the testimony, and argument will be made to-morrow.

A STRUGGLE BY GEORGE.

Our Congressman Fighting the Proposed Consolidation of Collection Districts.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—[Special.]—George again applied to-day to Mr. French, first assistant and now acting secretary of the treasury, for the withdrawal of the former's recommendation for consolidation of the Yaquina and Coos bay collection districts with the Portland district. He feels confident that the secretary will withdraw his recommendation. The recommendation of the secretary included among quite a number of other districts over the Union, those in Oregon. Mr. George's request was made under an entire understanding of the real question, and that great material changes have occurred in his state since this matter was passed upon by the treasurer. George says that whether the recommendation as to each of these places is reconsidered or not he will fight the proposed consolidation in the house to the bitter end. He called Assistant Secretary French's attention to a recent resolution of protest passed by the republican county and state conventions of Oregon.

THE SENATE BILL.

No bill embracing the secretary's proposition is before the house. The only bill before congress was introduced in the senate by Beck of Kentucky, which proposes to abolish the Coos Bay and Yaquina districts and add them to the Portland district. [illegible] the salary of the collector at Portland and increases the salary of [illegible] to $1050 each.

Philip Thompson of Kentucky has a bill before the house proposing a general scheme of [illegible] all internal revenue [illegible] at least [illegible] state [illegible] district.

[illegible] appropriating [illegible] the appropriation committee of the house will not make [illegible] necessary appropriation for the Yaquina and Coos bay districts. [illegible] has been urging the great importance of continuance of these districts on its members. He feels confident that no change will be made.

The Methodist Conference.

PHILADELPHIA, May 9.—In the Methodist conference Bishop Harris announced in response to the resolution adopted yesterday that the election of three additional bishops will adequately provide for all requirements.

The standing committee on missions reported recommending a bishop's episcopal residence in Europe and India. Dr. Wheeler then read a minority report, [illegible] that resident bishops in India and Europe are not needed. He moved its reference to a committee. Dr. Wheeler maintained that the resolution contemplates the establishment of an episcopal residence in Europe and India, in the same way as Boston and San Francisco. The report was referred to the committee on episcopacy.

The committee on judiciary reported that under the third restrictive rule the general conference has power to appoint a missionary bishop or superintendent for any foreign mission, limiting the jurisdiction to the same, and with the provision that all of the bishops shall be equal in authority and jurisdiction, and subject to the same assignments and work. It is the opinion of the committee that the general conference has power to fix the residence of all bishops, and partition the country occupied by the Methodist Episcopal church. The report was adopted with an amendment that the words "other than missionary bishops" be added so that it should read "all our bishops other than missionary bishops."

The Transfer of Eisendecker.

NEW YORK, May 9.—[Special.]—The transfer of Eisendecker, German minister at Washington, has caused much feeling among Germans and is regarded as another exhibition of Bismarck's anger at the Lasker affair. M. Meyer, editor of the New York Herald, said to-day: "Eisendecker's neglect to serve the Lasker resolutions to Frelinghuysen's hands or in his desk when they were returned through him, even though Frelinghuysen declined to receive them as forwarded by Bismarck, is an indication of the American secretary's superior diplomacy. Eisendecker was greatly embarrassed and forgot he was a diplomat and a gentleman and actually put his papers in his pocket and took them home. The fact is Eisendecker was not a trained diplomat. He was a naval officer. Germans here almost universally condemn Bismarck for carrying his ire to such extremes."

The Kellogg Case.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Attorney General Brewster in an interview said the Kellogg case was dismissed, but the innocence of the defendant was not proved, and if the latter had not pleaded the statute of limitations he would have had ample opportunity to vindicate his innocence. To this Governor Kellogg replies that it is not true that he pleaded the statute of limitations, and that the attorney general repeatedly said there was no case against him. He further declares that he will soon make a statement to the senate showing double dealing and hypocrisy by the attorney general in the whole matter.

California sales for the week were 75,400 pounds of fall and spring, including 38,000 of the former, at 1[illegible] 16,000 pounds at 18, and 13,000 at 10.

Meeting of Manufacturers.

NEW YORK, May 9.—Leading manufacturers of New York and adjoining states met just evening to devise means by which congress can be induced to abolish all duties on raw materials and so modify the present tariff that the burden shall fall more equally upon those engaged in manufacturing. It was resolved to unite in a society or association to be known as the manufacturer's reform league, the object of which is to further their interests by opposing protection and advocating free trade.

The Chinese.

NEW YORK, May 9.—[Special.]—Ah Long, a Chinese grocer from San Francisco, made application to Collector Robertson yesterday for permission to take up his residence and business in this city, which was granted. The Chinese consul called on Robertson yesterday with nine Chinamen just arrived by steamer from Havana, and who wanted permission to cross the United States and return home by way of San Francisco. They alleged that they were not laborers, and permission was accorded.

RAILROAD NOTES.

Questions Now Attracting Attention in Railroad Centers—News and Rumor.

NEW YORK, May 9.—[Special.]—Two matters now agitating the railroad world, and especially over land freight lines, are the reported resignation of Commissioner Fink and the proposition at the Transcontinental association meeting at St. Louis yesterday to form a money pool in place of the present one thereby drawing in the Texas Pacific and the Union Pacific, and virtually settling the existing differences. Your reporter asked at the Union Pacific office whether the road intended joining the new scheme, and agent Knowlton's representative said: "I don't think the Union Pacific will go into any pool just now unless it is pretty well protected. We control most of the freight now, and intend to keep it if we can. Within the early summer we will have a direct line to Portland, Oregon, which will no doubt give us an independent route to San Francisco."

Freight agent Malcom, of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, said: "The statement made in this morning's papers to the effect that we agree to become responsible for the acting of the St. Louis and San Francisco road is, I suppose, true. We can do it, you know. I don't really see how the St. Louis and San Francisco can get through unless by way of our route."

READY TO ENTER.

Agent Eddy of the Texas Pacific, which road, since it left the old pool, has done no rate cutting and to the surprise of other roads has adopted a peaceful policy, said: "Yes, we are ready to go into any pool that will give us fair play."

A well-informed railroad man said in regard to Commissioner Fink's rumored withdrawal: "It is a significant fact that when Fink's resignation was reported, the Baltimore and Ohio, which has been slashing into east bound freight rates, immediately restored them. No, I don't think Fink has resigned and my opinion is shared by a good many. Freight movement from the east is steadily increasing, and will continue to do so until the latter part of June, when the zenith will be reached."

Among the bears in Wall street it is stated that the drain on Central Pacific is due to the responsibility of the Southern Pacific line amounting nearly to $4,000,000, and that the Central Pacific is so crippled from light business that their next half yearly dividend will not be over 3 per cent., and probably passed altogether.

POLITICAL MATTERS.

THE PRESIDENT INTERVIEWED.

NEW YORK, May 9.—[Special.]—A reporter interviewed the president last night who said, in reply to the question, "Has your presence any political significance?" "New York City is my home. All my interests are here, and it is natural that I should come on from Washington every once in a while to see them. It is my own private concerns that bring me here on these flying trips. If, during my visit, some of my old friends and associates call upon me I am glad to see them, as private gentlemen, so you can see that with so many other things to keep in train I am in no way concerning myself about what is going on in politics."

DELEGATION SELECTED.

NEW YORK, May 9.—The Union League club have selected a delegation of thirty headed by Legrand B. Cannon, to attend the Chicago convention for the purpose of aiding in the adoption of a platform and the nomination of candidates such as will insure harmony in the party and command the confidence and respect of the country. The committee includes William Evarts, John Jay, C. M. Depew, J. Seligman, J. Pierrepont Morgan and J. H. Choate.

ACCIDENTS.

TWO MEN KILLED.

PARSONS, Kansas, May 9.—About 1 o'clock to-day the boiler of engine No. 43 on the M. K. and T. railway exploded in the round house of the Missouri Pacific at this place, killing two men and wounding several others, and completely demolishing four sections of the round house. The end walls were blown down, the roof was blown off and the entire section of the place ruined. The engine was one of the old ones, had recently been repaired and was undergoing tests when the explosion occurred. The damage to the company's property is $30,000.

THE RESULT OF CARELESSNESS.

NEW YORK, May 9.—[Special.]—It appears to be settled by the fate of the State of Florida and the Ronsune [illegible] that no compartment ships yet built are proof against total loss, if struck amidships. Also that the loss of the State of Florida was wholly due to the sheer carelessness or recklessness of the officers of the deck, as the night was clear and wind and wave moderate.

It is not often that we find in [illegible] druggists keep [illegible] so [illegible] kinds of [illegible] for coughs, colds and con[illegible] when it is only necessary to keep Allen's Lung Balsam, that old, reliable remedy which is a pure vegetable preparation and perfectly harmless as it contains no opium in any form. THE ALASKA BILL.

An Effort to be Made to Have It Called up and Passed by the House.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—[Special.]—[illegible] to-day received a telegram from Governor [illegible] transmitting a resolution of the California legislature, urging congress to pass the bill establishing territorial government for Alaska. Other members of the California delegation have received dispatches within a few days from W. T. Coleman & Co. of San Francisco and other business men of California, urging like action.

It has been understood on the Pacific coast that Randall objected to consideration of this bill, and among the dispatches several have been directed at him. Mr. Randall stated to-day that he has no earthly objection to the Alaska government bill, and he will do what he can to help its passage. He thought the erroneous impression of his opposition arose from the fact that when he reported from the committee on rules a resolution setting apart two days for territorial business some one asked if the Alaska bill was included and he answered "No." "I didn't draw the resolution setting apart those days," said he to-day, "and was not responsible for omitting the Alaska bill."

The California members this afternoon conferred with the committee on territories, who will have the floor next Tuesday under the Randall rule for territorial business, and it has agreed to make an effort to call up and pass the Alaska bill. Though not included in the special order it is thought the effort may be successful. The bill passed the senate two months ago, and is now on the house calendar having been reported favorably.

Smith, who is a step-son to Richards, confesses that he accompanied Richards and Charles Werst, brother-in-law to Richards, to the house of Bockstoe and stood at the gate to keep a lookout while Richards and Werst entered the house and Richards fired the shot which killed Bockstoe. Charles Werst was arrested at Decatur this morning.

GUARD OVERPOWERED AND KILLED.

MT. STERLING, Ky., May 9.—A penitentiary guard in charge of eight convicts, whom he was transferring from Frankfort to the prison in the Kentucky Central railroad, reached here yesterday afternoon and started on foot for the prison. Then three prisoners escaped. The other five were trying to reach the prison.

Riding to Scherer's store, he brought his gun to bear on the proprietor demanding his money or life. He was answered by a shot from the storekeeper's revolver, when the young desperado put spurs to his horse and escaped. A posse have gone in pursuit.

COLLISION BETWEEN BROKERS.

NEW YORK, May 9.—In the billiard room of the Windsor hotel last night Addison Cammack and Alexander Taylor, well known Wall street brokers, came in collision. Taylor, who became somewhat excited during the argument with Cammack, told him he was a welcher and well known as such. Cammack denied this and Taylor retorted by calling him a liar. Cammack sprang up and struck Taylor on the head with a heavy gold-headed cane and knocked him down. The combatants were separated by friends.

A BOLD PROCEEDING.

GALVESTON, May 9.—Laredo special: At noon to-day the Mexican federal troops marched from the garrison and formed in a line in front of Milmo Brothers' bank in New Laredo. A peremptory demand was made for $40,000 alleged to be due the government, and upon a refusal by Mr. Dave Milmo, an American citizen and part owner of the bank, the government officials entered the bank and took out twenty sacks of silver of $2000 each and marched off.

LOUISVILLE, May 9.—The Courier-Journal's Elizabethtown, Kentucky, special says: This morning about 1 o'clock a masked mob came from town, taking the keys from the jailer they took Miles [illegible], a negro who some weeks ago outraged Miss Varner, and carrying him a few miles from town hanged him to a tree. A placard was fastened to his body saying that he must not be cut down till 10 o'clock. None of the lynchers were recognized.

TRAIN WRECKERS BAFFLED.

EL PASO, Texas, May 9.—The El Paso Times says: Robbers attacked the north train on the Mexican Central forty miles below Queretaro on [illegible]. After the killing of one of their number the robbers fled.

THE TURF.

SECOND DAY AT LEXINGTON.

LEXINGTON, May 9.—The second day of the Kentucky association spring meeting was bright and the warm weather had greatly improved the track. There was a good attendance.

The first race, one and one-eighth miles, was a walk over for Athlone.

In the selling race Tom Barlow took the lead, but was passed by Springer at the quarter. Springer was never headed and won easily by eight lengths, Tom Barlow second, Major Pickett third. Time, 1:[illegible]. The winner was not sold.

Robinson stakes, two-year old fillies, half-mile. The start was very poor, Trousseau going three lengths in front, Retinue second and Olathe third, followed by Onise Bright, Impromptu, Ouida, Wanda, Trophy, Lady Craft and Lilly C. These positions remained unchanged at the quarter, where the horses took a closer order, and made a run for home. Trousseau won by three-quarters of a length, Retinue second, Wanda and Impromptu a dead heat for the third place, followed by Olathe, Ouida, Trophy, Lilly C., Lady Craft and Onise Bright, in the order named. Time, 53½.

Phoenix hotel stakes, three year olds, mile and a quarter. Richard L. went off in the lead, Neophyte second, Admiral third, Voyager fourth. Admiral took the lead before reaching the stand, and was never afterwards headed, winning under pull by ten lengths, Richard L. second, eight lengths in front of Neophyte, third. Time, 2:16.

Handicap, all ages, 1⅛ miles—Saunterer had the lead in the start, Hickory Jim second, Jersey [illegible] third, followed by Vanguard, Wave o' Light and Bonnie Australian in the order named. Ida B. was left at the pole. Hickory Jim took the lead at the stand and was never afterwards headed, winning by a length, Bonnie Australian second, Wave o' Light third. Time, 2:[illegible].

THE HUDSON BAY ROUTE.

A committee of the Manitoba assembly have been investigating the matter of the proposed railroad to Hudson bay, and among other statements say:

"Your committee begs to draw the attention of your honorable house to the immense commercial importance to this province of the proposed route of communication, whether by rail and water or by rail alone. We find that area under cultivation in the states of Minnesota and Dakota and in this province in 1882-3 aggregated nearly 9,000,000 of acres, which produced a crop of all kinds of grain amounting to upwards of 80,000,000 bushels. One railway alone, the St. P. M. & M., carried southward 13,087,140 bushels of wheat, and 379,010 barrels of flour during the year ending June 30, 1883, and it is safe to assume that had the outlet via Hudson's Bay existed at least one half of this produce would have followed that channel to the seaboard.

"Your committee feel justified in assuring that this route would be extensively availed of by the shippers of this country and the neighboring states of America in consequence of the fact that the distance from Winnipeg to Liverpool via Hudson's bay is 670 miles less than from Winnipeg to Liverpool via Montreal and the straits of Belle Isle and 771 miles nearer than via Montreal and Cape Race, while it is 1013 miles nearer than by way of New York. By sea, Churchill harbor is sixty-four miles nearer Liverpool than is Montreal, and 114 miles nearer than is New York.

"Not only is the all rail route much shorter than by any other line, but nature has provided water ways from the head of navigation of the Red river to the foot of Lake Winnipeg, which can be utilized for over six months in each year, thus reducing the length of railway line to be traversed to within 400 miles, or a less distance than from Winnipeg to Port Arthur.

"Your committee has, therefore, no reason to doubt that a railway from hence to Hudson's bay will prove a successful and remunerative undertaking, and are satisfied that such an outlet will do more to stimulate production in the province and the northwest generally than any other enterprise."

THE RECENT FAILURES.

Grant & Ward's Troubles Greater than at First Imagined.

LIABILITIES ESTIMATED AT TEN MILLIONS.

Interviews with Interested Persons and Leading Brokers—The Movement to Aid General Grant—Etc.

NEW YORK, May 9.—Suspicion grows that the Grant & Ward failure is much more serious than at first suspected. A well known member of the exchange to-day said: "For four or five months I have heard rumors of the transactions of Grant & Ward. I do not think $8,000,000 is by any means an extravagant estimate of the liabilities of the firm. My [illegible] they [illegible] $10,000,000. When the failure was announced I said it would be the largest Wall street [illegible], and I am more firmly convinced than ever of the truth of my estimates. What the assets can be no one knows, but probably very small, and the disparity in figures will undoubtedly cause surprise."

A clerk of Grant & Ward said: "The amount of the liabilities will undoubtedly be very large. We are discovering new business every day. Yes, I know the names of some of the persons caught, but can not give them. Some gentlemen are in for $500,000 and others for still larger sums."

MEMBERS OF THE FIRM INTERVIEWED.

William C. Smith, of the stock exchange, a member of the firm, said: "I do not think the statement of assignees will be ready until the latter part of next week. I do not think the liabilities will reach $8,000,000, although that is a matter of which I have no knowledge. Figures are all guesses, and are, I think, extravagant and large. The railroad companies which received loans on securities which have been transferred to other persons are amply protected and lose nothing. The losses will fall chiefly upon individuals who have invested money with the firm. The business was conducted by Ward. Of course General Grant and Fred have known of these transactions, but I do not think they were fully aware of the large amounts involved. They have been led on by Ward, and will of course lose very heavily."

Fred Grant was interviewed, and said he was looking for employment, as he had nothing to do now. It would depend whether anything was saved from the wreck whether he went into business for himself.

The Marine bank has begun suit against Fred. Ward to recover $710,000, the amount of overdraft paid out by the bank on Ward's account. An attachment has been granted against the house and personal property of Ward in Brooklyn, and the sheriff is in possession.

FROM FRIDAY'S TRIBUNE.

From the New York Tribune of Friday: Further details of the transaction between General Grant and William H. Vanderbilt were learned yesterday. General Grant's visit to Vanderbilt was made Sunday, and then the $150,000 check was given. It is said that at the request of General Grant the check was dated at [illegible] Saturday, and the check of Grant & Ward on the Marine bank Mr. Vanderbilt agreed not to use for a day or two. It is not believed the ex-president knew the state of the firm's affairs, and Ward is credited with furnishing satisfactory explanation of the circumstances under which Vanderbilt's consent was obtained when the proffered check of Grant & Ward had been rendered worthless by the two failures. The day after the failure General Grant called on Vanderbilt at the latter's desire and it is said that assurances were given he would be fully protected in the matter, even if great sacrifices were necessary in the disposition of Mrs. Grant's property.

Frederick D. Grant while not a member of the suspended firm had his office with them and has been interested in their operations. When asked regarding his assignment he replied: "I can say nothing about the matter but I had everything with them and suffer along with them."

Jesse Grant, another son of General Grant, who made an assignment yesterday, could not be seen. He is not a partner in Grant & Ward, but it is supposed he had business relations with them and that his finances have been involved in the same way as those of Frederick's.

A MEETING HELD.

A meeting of the executive committee of the New York, Lake Erie and Western railroad was held yesterday to consider the relations of the company and Grant & Ward. A sub-committee was appointed [illegible] after [illegible] and securities of the company placed in the firm's charge. The firm [illegible] considerable sums of Erie paper and held [illegible] in securities. The extent of advances made to the company are said to be about $1,000,000 and the company wishes to protect its remaining collateral.

An enormous amount of unsecured liabilities of the firm of Grant & Ward exist, comprising notes and simple receipts for money received for speculation.

The story told regarding the circumstances of the firm by those who are in a position to be acquainted with the facts is as follows: First Ward [illegible] with the prestige of General Grant's name to aid the [illegible] in securing capital and inspiring confidence in their ability and position. Money was raised on notes that the ex-president and James D. Fish had endorsed. To what extent the responsibility of the condition of affairs rests upon Fish and upon Ward entirely cannot be learned.

THE DETAILS NEGLECTED.

It is not believed Gen. Grant or U. S. Grant Jr. paid close attention to the details of the copartnership. The agreement provides each member could withdraw $1000 a month, it is said, the profits above that sum being retained as capital. Neither of the Grants is believed to have paid closer attention to the details than the regular drawing of his allowance. The scheme carried out to obtain the most funds was based on advances made by the firm to contractors for Indian and other supplies to the government, the firm taking assignments of claims from these men and collecting on them when the contracts were approved in the regular course of government proceeding. By representations respecting these contracts large sums of money were obtained on notes or receipts given by the firm or individual members. High rates of interest were paid and in many cases advances were secured for only a few months. Confidence in the house, however, caused many persons to let their money lie unclaimed for a long time.

It is stated on good authority that there are outstanding nearly $250,000 of these unsecured obligations of the firm, held between individuals. It is said liabilities of this character will amount in all to about $500,000.

SURPRISED DETECTIVES.

The Brooklyn Eagle says: "Persons passing along Pierrepont street this morning were startled to see two well dressed men grasp the head of a horse attached to a coupe, and order the driver to stop. Many thought they were to witness a highway robbery, but they were mistaken. The men were detectives and the inmate of the coupe was Ferdinand Ward. The detectives produced papers from their pockets, and evidently could not find the one they were in search of. One of the men said: 'Mr. Ward, you are our prisoner,' and it was when Ward asked for proof of their authority that a search for the warrant was begun and a troubled look overspread the countenances of both men. The pockets of each were turned inside out and a bundle of papers they carried was examined about seventeen times to no avail. They got after the coupe as Mr. Ward was rapidly driven toward the New York ferry. Ward had not been out of the house more than half an hour when a deputy sheriff arrived with a writ of attachment for him.

GOING HOME TO MOTHER.

As Ward could not be served with the paper it was nailed on the front door, and excited curiosity. The deputy made an inventory of articles in the house, when the family commenced preparations to depart. The house is elaborately and expensively furnished. The Wards have lived in the house about five years and four weeks ago their only child was born. He was christened Ferdinand Grant Ward, after General Grant. The refuge of the Ward family will be the home of Mrs. Ward's mother, Mrs. Green, No. 33 Monroe place, and thither the deposed ones journeyed. Mrs. Green is the widow of a former cashier of the Marine bank.

The suit in which the attachment is issued is brought by the Marine bank against the firm of Grant & Ward, and General Grant is made co-defendant. The suit is for $700,000. [illegible] Jones of the New York Times says: General Grant's fund of $250,000 is absolutely safe. Hitherto we have paid the interest annually. The 1st of May each year has found the General in possession of $15,140, interest in full on the investment. Hereafter we shall pay him quarterly, not only because he needs the money, but because we do not mean that anyone shall lay hands on it.

GENERAL GRANT'S TROUBLES.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—[Special.]—Grant's friends in the senate say that while he is not left in necessity by reason of the failure of the firm of Grant & Ward, he is very badly hurt. It is reported also that the fund of $250,000 raised for him some time ago in New York was invested in securities which are not yielding any considerable income. A senator who is a warm personal friend of Grant's, said to your correspondent to-day: "I am not greatly surprised by the failure of Grant & Ward, because I never had a high opinion of Ward's ability as a financier. I have met him upon several occasions. He seemed to me to be a nervous, flighty young man, who was continually dancing about from one thing to another, without a clear idea of what he was doing. The Grants, however, had the highest admiration and esteem for him. They considered him a wonderful operator. From what I have been able to see in the newspapers I judge the failure can be traced more directly to his speculation than to those other parties, and Fish, the president of the Marine National bank."

"What effect do you think the failure will have upon Grant's political prospects?"

"I am afraid it will have a very disastrous effect. I know that it is a severe blow to his friends who had contemplated bringing him before the Chicago convention in the event of a deadlock as a compromise candidate. I think the bill introduced Wednesday by Edmunds to place the general on the retired list will be passed. I am sure it will go through the senate and it ought to be passed by the house. If Grant had not been elected president he would undoubtedly have been general of the army for the remainder of his life, or until such time as he chose to be retired on full pay."

"I was with the general Sunday last. He was in complete ignorance of the impending disaster. Other than this fund he does not possess a dollar, and more than that he is deeply and almost irretrievably in debt. What he did in Wall street he did for his sons."

Frederick Grant said: "I have just turned over all my claims against the firm to McNamee, my assignee. I have done this in order to get my matters settled up, so that I may do something else. All I had was invested with the firm, and I am now in search of a job."

THE PRESS ON EDMUNDS' RELIEF BILL.

NEW YORK, May 9.—[Special.]—The Times says: "Congress was never presented with a simpler or more grateful duty than that of passing with all proper promptness, Edmunds' bill for placing General Grant on the retired list of the army. Circumstances, in which every honest man will give him hearty sympathy, have involved him in misfortune. This country will respond with profound sympathy to the action of congress."

The Tribune recalls the fact that the first movement in this direction was made by Blaine in 1881 and '82. It says in regard to Grant's Wall street case: "Nobody has any words except of sympathy for Grant. Everybody understands that he knew nothing of the details of the business and was the victim of others."

The Sun says: "It was proper and fitting that congress in recognition of his military service for the people of the country provide generously for his personal welfare. We think they have done it. Is it not going too far for the nation to help him now make up his losses as a stock broker in Wall street? We would say that Grant is of course entitled to the best the land affords, but how is he to be kept beyond reach of pecuniary troubles if he is going to swim with swordfish in Wall street?"

YOUNG GRANT SELLS SOME PROPERTY.

RIVERHEAD, L. I., May 9.—The following transaction was recorded in the Suffolk county court to-day: U. S. Grant Jr. to Abraham H. Jones of New York City, deed of a farm and country seat at Half Way Hollow Hills, town of Huntington, dated February 21, 1884. The expressed consideration is $60,000.

IN WALL STREET.

A Number of "Bearish" Rumors put Afloat to Influence the Market.

NEW YORK, May 9.—Governments lower for registered 4s. Railways lower. Erie new 2s broke to [illegible] on rumors that interest on the bonds would not be paid. Officials of the road repeated [illegible] these reports in the stock exchange to-day. The features of speculation were the strength of Missouri Pacific, Western Union and trunk line shares and the weakness of Erie and Northwest. Notwithstanding a few weak spots, there was a better tone to speculation generally, with a more settled feeling than for some days. Reports that Commissioner Fink had withdrawn his resignation had a favorable influence on trunk line shares. Erie broke from 15¾ to 13[illegible] for common and from 18¼ to [illegible] for preferred on rumors that the company had a much larger amount of money on deposit at the Marine bank than reported and that the company would in consequence default on the June interest. Union Pacific was attacked by rumors that its July dividend would be passed. The general market opened irregular. Union Pacific was weaker. Between 11 and 12 changes were unimportant. Early in the afternoon the market displayed considerable strength and there was a general advance. Late in the day a weakness in Union Pacific and Erie took place. The remainder of the market was but slightly affected, and many stocks were firm at the close, among them Pacific Mail.

It was authoritatively stated that the rumors alluded to above were made out of whole cloth. A dispatch was received from the treasurer of the Union Pacific company at Boston, after the close of business, stating that the reports were without foundation whatever and that there had been no meeting called of the directors or the executive committee for the week.

The market closed firm. The borrowing demand for stocks was unusually active and Northern Pacific preferred and Union Pacific lent at 1 per cent [illegible]. It is understood that holders of the mortgage on the Wabash road will be asked to fund their coupons and receive scrip for the same for two or three years. This plan, it is claimed, will enable the company to take care of its floating debt and provide new equipment, etc.

Compared with last night's closing prices are ⅝ lower for Central Pacific, and ⅜ for Northern Pacific.

The tories are jubilant as they consider the split in the party ended. The liberals however expect it soon to reopen. The meeting unanimously agreed to oppose the franchise bill.

HEAVY VOTE POLLED IN PARIS.

PARIS, May 9.—[Special.]—Never in history has Paris polled so many votes as in the election now going on. The total number is in excess by 3131 of the total number in 1881, and the revolutionists—that is to say, the autonomists, socialists, anarchists and collectivists—poll this year over 175,000 votes, being nearly 10,000 more than in 1881. Though only forty-eight of the eighty municipal councilors have as yet been elected, nevertheless the political significance of the elections may now be fairly gauged and the key note to the next legislative elections is already sounded. The opportunists—that is to say the ministerial party—have had a most decided check. The conservatives have scored slight progress, but so slight that as a royalist paper the Gaulois says, "It would take 200 years at their present rate of progression before monarchy could be peacefully restored." The revolutionists have won a brilliant victory. The enormous numerical increase of the socialists, and their unexpected [illegible] and solidity and political unity now constitute an interesting spectacle not only for France but for Europe. Ministerial papers seem to feel that their candle is now burning at both ends. The Bonapartists utter a sort of snarl of discontent like the traditional dog in the manger.

THE WEST INDIES.

RIOT BETWEEN BRITISH AND SPANISH SUBJECTS.

NEW ORLEANS, May 9.—The steamship Raleigh arrived this morning from Bermuda, and reports that on April 26 a riot occurred between the Spanish and British subjects. The latter held grants on which the Spaniards trespassed, and being ordered off made an attack with sheath knives. Two men were killed and four wounded. The British took refuge on an American schooner and the steamship Raleigh. While the English were on those vessels the Spaniards robbed their houses. The next day the English landed, captured the ringleaders and recovered a portion of the stolen property.

The Sharon Divorce Case.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 9.—In the Sharon divorce case yesterday afternoon Mrs. Vesta Snow was put upon the stand. She told Mr. Barnes that she saw the marriage contract for the first time in 1881, just as she stated when she was on the stand before. Mr. Barnes then called Robert Wilson, husband of Martha Wilson, who testified that Miss Hill had promised him and his wife $1000 if they would say they had seen the marriage contract in 1880. He stated he had not seen the contract in 1880. The conference [illegible] the next subject of inquiry. Sarah Althea had asked him and his wife to stand by the contract and he had agreed. She had told him that Sharon dictated and she had written the paper. She wanted him to say that he had seen it in [illegible] 1881. Sarah Althea further told him that the contract was written at the Oakland ferry depot, and was written on his knee while she was sitting in [illegible]. He remembered about that conversation, except that he had agreed to swear that he saw the document in 1880.

The Sharon divorce case has entered on a period of surprising revelations. Mrs. Martha Wilson testified yesterday to having given false evidence on behalf of plaintiff and Harry L. Wells, who testified that he heard Sharon introduce Miss Hill to Mr. True, deceased, of Santa Cruz, as his wife, confessed to-day that the story was a fabrication and that nothing of the kind ever occurred. In making the confession he broke into tears and said: "I [illegible] there was [illegible] in the affair and I wasn't to have $10,000."

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST.

Western Oregon.

The coyotes about Needy, Clackamas county, are getting very numerous and feasting on sheep and pigs.

The indebtedness of Oregon City is $3788 60 more than last year. It is now $5775 92. The new engine house cost $3000.

A few days ago the residence of J. Gaston in Washington county caught fire and was saved only by strenuous efforts of the citizens. Mr. Gaston is now repairing the damaged parts.

An Albany exchange says: Parties from Fish lake confirm the report that Ike Nickelson, who has been missing from Prineville several weeks, is dead. He went to Fish lake to look after his ranch, and from there his tracks were traced ten or fifteen miles and then lost. No other trace of him can be found.

About 40,000 bushels of wheat have been shipped from Independence during the last few weeks. This is some of the wheat that was being held for higher prices when it was up to 90 and 92 cents. Now about 71 cents is obtained, 20 cents on a bushel is $200 on a thousand bushels or $8000 on 40,000 bushels, considerable of a loss to some one.

The city election came off last Monday at Corvallis. The total number of votes cast at this election was 362, being 16 less than at the election one year ago. The following is the result of the election: Mayor, M. Jacobs; Recorder, E. H. Taylor; Marshall, A. R. Pygall; Treasurer, R. F. Irvine; Aldermen, First ward, P. P. Griffin; Second ward, Thomas Graham; Third ward, J. H. Lewis.

At the recent city election held at Oregon City Cochran was elected mayor by a vote of 118 to 98 for Porter. Califf was elected recorder by a vote of 110 to 101 for Straight. Messrs. Pequet, [illegible], Caufield, Norris, Barin and Strickler were elected councilmen, Burns assessor, Buck treasurer, Nutting attorney, and Kelly marshal. From [illegible] D. Adair, who has been busily engaged in surveying and looking up a feasible route for the proposed road from Astoria to Clatsop, the Astorian learns that a good line for the road is found to be from Smith's point west of north to tide land near Lewis & Clarke's, a distance of one and a half miles. It is calculated that this can be built for $13,463, that amount being considered ample for a bridge road thirty feet wide, securely built for that distance. From this point to Power's point over the tide land three fourths of a mile by way of a road sixteen feet wide, is calculated to cost $4386, from there the road would extend a mile and a half to a junction with the county road at Adair's landing, which it is considered could be put in A 1 condition for $2500, thus making $20,000 the estimate of cost of construction of the entire road. From Adair's landing the line projected could go over the Skipanon where bridged and by county road to the seaside, a distance of one and a half miles, or a total distance from Smith's point to the seaside of about five miles. There is now $16,800 subscribed, and work could be begun so as to complete the road this season, a very desirable consummation.

Celebrated Liver Pills
In offering to the public Dr. C. McLane's Celebrated Liver Pills, as a remedy for Liver and Bilious Complaints, we presume no apology will be needed. The great prevalence of Liver Complaint and Bilious Diseases of all kinds throughout the United States, and particularly in the West and South, where, in the majority of cases, the patient is not within the reach of a regular physician, requires that some remedy should be provided that would not in the least impair the constitution, and yet be safe and effectual. That such is the character of Dr. C. McLane's Liver Pills, there can be no doubt. The great success which has invariably attended their use, will, we think, be sufficient to convince the most incredulous. It has been our sincere wish that these Pills should be fairly tested, and stand or fall by the effects produced. That they have been so tested and that the result has been in every respect favorable, we call tens of thousands to witness who have experienced their beneficial effects.
DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS are not held forth or recommended, (like most of the popular medicines of the day), as universal cure alls, but simply as a specific for Liver Complaints, and those symptoms connected with a deranged state of that organ.

THE PRELIMINARY STRATEGY.

In the summing up for the national republican convention it appears to be conceded by Mr. Blaine's most sanguine calculators that their favorite lacks at least fifty votes of a majority. That is, they claim for him, with more or less appearance of confidence, about 360 votes. Blaine's opponents do not concede him so many; some of them estimate his number at no more than 300, and others again as low as 270. Estimates of the number of Arthur delegates vary quite as much. Some of the ardent supporters of Mr. Arthur place the number as high as 380, while certain of his opponents mark it down below 250. It is quite apparent that in this wide range of calculation there is great room on both sides for mistake. An impartial view of the situation tends to confirm the opinion that the strength of these two leading candidates, at the opening of the convention, will be nearly at an equipoise, with the chance that Blaine's will be somewhat the greater. But it does not appear probable that either of them will have much more than 330 votes, while the number necessary to nominate is 411. Since it now seems to be settled that Blaine has not and cannot expect a clear majority at the opening of the convention, and that there will be a prolonged struggle, with doubtful result, if his name is submitted, it may be regarded as quite probable that he will not permit it to go before the convention at all. It is, indeed, a question whether he is any nearer the nomination than he was in 1876 and 1880. Blaine and Arthur, as the leading candidates, would now sustain nearly the same relations to the convention that Grant and Blaine did four years ago. Out of two so situated, experience teaches us to expect a third.

When the balloting began in 1880 the vote stood: Grant, 304; Blaine, 284; Sherman, 93; Edmunds, 34; Washburne, 30, and Windom, 10. On the second ballot Grant's vote was 305, and on the eighth the historic 306 was reached. On the thirty-fifth it ran up to 313, but on the next and last ballot it fell back to the normal strength of 306. The Blaine vote started at 284, fell to 282 at once, then to 281 and 280, rallied on the thirteenth to 285, fell on the nineteenth to 279, and on the twentieth to 276. His vote hovered around that number, with slight variations both ways, until the thirty-fifth ballot, when it fell to 257, Grant's being 313 at that time. It appearing then from the decline of Blaine's vote and the increase of Grant's, that the latter was likely to win if this struggle went on, the "break" for Garfield was made, and the contest was terminated at once. Something analagous to this will very probably happen should the names of Blaine and Arthur be pitted against each other in the approaching convention.

But there will be preliminary trials of strength in the convention which will surely point the way to some result, long before a ballot is taken. Divisions upon questions relating to the organization of the convention will indicate plainly what force is preponderant in it. Blaine, who has been beaten twice, and will not want to risk another open defeat, can tell then whether to allow his name to be submitted to the convention or not. Against the man who has most strength and who appears most likely to receive the nomination, the field will combine. Blaine, probably, because of his pronounced strength and of his supposed reserve power, which it is feared he may draw upon successfully when Logan, Sherman and other candidates appear no longer to have a chance, will be the man against whom the combination will be made on preliminary issues, just as the combination was made against Grant on the questions pertaining to the preliminary organization in 1880. There is a question to come before the convention at an early stage of its proceedings which will furnish a test of the strength of the leading candidates, and we advise all who feel an interest in the result to watch for it attentively. Virginia sends contesting delegations. One of them is sent by a union of the old readjuster party (which has now resolved to call itself republican), with a portion of the original republican party of the state; the other is sent by the feeble remnant of the old republican organization of Virginia, which repudiates the alliance with the readjusters because its managers do not wish to have their own leadership disturbed, and are not so anxious to have a large party as to have a party which they can speak for and control. One of these organizations has chosen an Arthur delegation to go to the national convention, the other has chosen a Blaine delegation. In the contest which will take place before the convention the merits of the contesting parties will be considered very little if at all. It will be a straight issue on candidates, and will bring on the tug of war between Arthur and Blaine. Friends of Edmunds and other "outside" candidates will vote one way or the other as it may seem to them advisable, in order to hold the strong man—Blaine or Arthur—in check. Here will be the opportunity for trades between the leading and the minor candidates. A similar contest from Florida is to be settled, and it will be settled in the same way; though the Florida contest will be less important because the delegation is small.

The skillful politicians who are accustomed to "work" conventions will all do their best to secure advantages in these preliminary operations. If Blaine finds the results of these trials of strength against him, it is highly probable that he will forbid the use of his name in the balloting, and reassert that he is not a candidate and has not been.

The shrewder democrats, who are looking forward to campaign arguments, are becoming fearful of the effect of the record the party is making in the national house of representatives. Congress has been in session more than twenty weeks, and the house has accomplished but very little in the way of legislation. The senate has sent to the house some three hundred bills, most of which have not even been referred to committees. The great appropriation bills are yet to be considered, and it is now abundantly certain either that the house will compel congress to sit until August, or the great majority of the business before it will be left unattended to. It is needless to say that amid the awaiting bills are some of great importance. The policy of the democrats, however, is to retard all business, save that which it is supposed will tend to the political advantage of the democracy, while the refusal to concur with the senate in certain naval appropriations is evidence of a theory that the people will look only to the amount of, and not at all to the character of, the appropriations. In this the democrats will be disappointed. Economy—a judicious economy—is one thing; a refusal to spend money for the dignity, the safety and the progress of the nation quite another.

The gentlemen who nominated Mr. Blaine for the support of the delegates at the Maine convention eloquently observed that "he follows the sweet walks of literature, wrapped up in the sweet serenity of seclusion, and the people have delighted to follow his steps with the rose and the violet." The still air of delightful study is certainly more serene than the storm of faction, and the paths of literature have fewer thorns than those of politics.

The Rutland (Vt.) Herald says that the nomination of Blaine means a "bolt" in every republican state in the east; the nomination of Arthur is but a bare fighting chance for victory, while the nomination of Edmunds would sweep the doubtful states at the east like a spring freshet.

Mr. James R. Keene will have occasion now to consider the promise of Mr. Jay Gould that he would provide him with a return passage to California in an emigrant car.

CONTRASTS IN MEN.

The death of John F. Slater of Norwich, Connecticut, which was announced in yesterday's dispatches, will recall to the memory and gratitude of the country his munificent gift of a million of dollars, in trust, as a fund, the avails of which were to be devoted to the education of the colored people of the south. In making this gift he said that he had for several years been considering the best plan for benefiting his fellow-beings, through the use of the abundant means which God had entrusted to him, and, being favorably impressed with the workings of the Peabody fund, he had come to the conclusion that he could do no better, in an act of charity, than to put one million of dollars of his estate to the uses of education for the colored people. This noble act of philanthropy was as sensible in its provisions as it was generous in size. Mr. Slater named for trustees men of character and business ability, and left them free to apply the fund according to such methods as they might devise, only providing that the fund and its work should be perpetual and used solely to provide for colored persons in the southern states the blessings of a Christian education. The disabilities formerly suffered by these people, and their singular patience and fidelity in the great crisis of the nation, have established for them a just claim on the sympathy and good will of humane and patriotic men. "I can not but feel," said Mr. Slater, "the compassion that is due in view of their prevailing ignorance, which exists through no fault of their own."

It is not only as voters but as citizens in the general sense that the education of the freedmen is of vast importance to the well being of the country. Any large class of illiterate citizens, whether enfranchised or not, is an element of national weakness and demoralization. "I am persuaded," said Robert Hall, "that the extreme profligacy, improvidence and misery which are so prevalent among the laboring classes in many countries are chiefly to be ascribed to the want of education. In proof of this we need only cast our eyes on the condition of the Irish, compared with that of the peasantry in Scotland. Among the former you behold nothing but beggary, wretchedness and sloth; in Scotland, on the contrary, under the disadvantages of a worse climate and more unproductive soil, a degree of decency and comfort, the fruit of sobriety and industry, are conspicuous among the lower classes. And to what is this disparity in their situation to be ascribed, except to the influence of education? In Ireland the education of the poor is miserably neglected; very few of them can read, and they grow up in a total ignorance of what it most benefits a rational creature to understand, while in Scotland the establishment of free schools in every parish, an essential branch of the ecclesiastical constitution of the country, brings the means of instruction within the reach of the poorest, who are there inured to decency, industry and order." Ignorance is a social disorganizer. The more instructed a man is the more clearly he will see that his interests are indissolubly connected with those of his fellow-men. To educate the freedmen is then to bring them into more sympathetic and helpful relations not only with their white neighbors but with the country at large. And the sympathetic and helpful relations of all the classes in a community is what constitutes civilization and gives enduring strength to a state.

The gift of Mr. Slater was then an act of private statesmanship not less than public charity. It differed from the Peabody fund in being for the benefit of the colored people only. While on a visit to this, his native country, in 1866, the London philanthropist, George Peabody, established an educational fund of $2,500,000 which he increased in 1869 to $3,000,000. From 1868 to 1879 the total disbursements from this fund in twelve southern states were $1,136 556. These disbursements, according to the report of the commissioners of education, have had a remarkable influence in developing the school spirit in the south, in awakening the people to a sense of their obligations with reference to the support of public schools, and in maintaining a high standard for such schools. This last result has been accomplished by the wise policy pursued by the administrators of the fund, who have insisted upon a certain degree of excellence in a school as a condition of its receiving aid. The benefits of the Peabody fund have been enjoyed almost exclusively by the white people, so that the limitation of Mr. Slater's gift to the colored people of the south who are both poorer and more ignorant, was eminently appropriate. It is worth remarking here that since 1862, over $6,000,000 have been contributed by the people of the northern states toward southern education. A considerable amount of this large sum has been given in the form of ecclesiastical benefactions. The great want now in the south is primary education, the capacity for being educated that comes from knowing how to read and write. The colored people particularly need education to make their religion good for anything as a moral force. They need, what Mr. Slater proposed that they should have, instruction in the common branches of secular education which should be associated with training in just notions toward God and man in the light of the holy scriptures. His gift was a noble and patriotic contribution to the safety and perpetuity of our free institutions, and we trust that his recognition of the duty implied in the words, "to those to whom much is given much shall be required," may act as an incentive to other wealthy men who are desirous of erecting a monument to their names "more enduring than brass."

What a contrast is presented in the acts and purposes of philanthropists like John F. Slater and mere plutocrats like the late A. T. Stewart. When the latter was at the hight of his commercial success a committee of students from Harvard college visited New York to solicit money for the erection of a public building in Cambridge. They called on Mr. Stewart and, presenting their case to him, respectfully urged him to contribute to the proposed building, saying that he might have it called by his name and thus preserve the latter in an enduring memorial. Mr. Stewart treated them politely, took them through his immense store, and, while standing in the center of it, said with a sweeping gesture of his right hand: "You speak of my name; here is my name, and yet it is not here;" meaning that his name, like his fame, was everywhere in the world. And so indeed it was at that time. He was a merchant prince, the greatest dry goods man the world ever saw. He had enterprise and ability and, from the standpoint of his own aspirations and purposes, had attained an unwonted success. His name was everywhere. But he was utterly destitute of sympathy or generosity. He crushed out his rivals without pity and, like the fool in the parable, cared neither for God nor man. He seemed utterly hardened against the human race, and, in his contemptuous neglect of God, fell below the Pagans, for they display religious sensibility and he had none. He never went to church, nor to clubs or political conventions. He lived alone until he took possession of his palace, which he built for display at a cost of three million dollars, when he began giving Sunday dinners to people who paid for them by admiring their host. It was while showing his guests the picture gallery one one of these occasions that he took the cold which resulted in his death. Since then this palace has been the lonely and uncomfortable abode of his widow. His favorite store does not preserve his name, for the firm of A. T. Stewart & Co. has been dissolved. His wealth did not obtain for him even the poor man's title to six feet of mother earth, and it is uncertain whether his bones are resting even in a nameless grave. His "name is not here" indeed; it is nowhere, and this is the proper termination of a selfish life. The name of the philanthropist will be "held in everlasting remembrance," but the name of the plutocrat "shall rot."

Judge McKennon of Philadelphia and of the United States district court took occasion to say in deciding that the Philadelphia Times had not libeled the New Orleans lottery, that "it seems extraordinary after congress has said that a man who conducts such a business as the one now in question ought to go to the penitentiary that a citizen cannot express his opinion or approval of a law on the books."

A MASQUERADER.

The conduct of Collector Robertson, who has not hesitated to use his official position and influence to secure his election as delegate to Chicago in the interest of Mr. Blaine, can not fail of condemnation by all who believe in decent politics. He has posed as a civil service reformer, and his appointment by President Arthur was ostensibly made to please the reformers, but still he has retained his position on the state committee, and is now a delegate elect to Chicago, with the avowed intention of trying to make Mr. Blaine's nomination possible, as it was claimed he made Garfield's nomination possible, and doubtless with the same expectation of reward. The Boston Herald, an able organ of the independents, and opposed to Arthur, draws the following contrast between his honorable and dignified conduct and the shameful conduct of Judge Robertson:

> Now, Judge Robertson, as an individual and a republican, has a perfect right to favor the nomination of Mr. Blaine or any other man, and the president has done no more or less than his duty in respecting the political freedom of his subordinate, provided that the duties of his office have been promptly performed, of which there appears latterly to be some doubt. But Judge Robertson, as collector, has no right to use his official position, or the time which belongs to the people, to advance his own interests, or to promote the ambition of an intriguing politician who desires to be president. And especially is he debarred from such action while he claims credit as a reformer, and allies himself with those who oppose President Arthur's nomination upon the ground that his affiliations in the past have been with the enemies of reform. Mr. Arthur was never connected with a worse set of politicians than are the sorehead stalwarts and hungry halfbreeds who make up the principal strength of the unprincipled combination which is to-day trying to elect a Blaine delegation from New York. And among them all there is not one more deserving of contempt and censure than is the life-long machine manipulator who extorted nomination to the collectorship made Garfield's assassination possible. The wire pulling politician is never so dangerous or so despicable as when he assumes the role of a reformer to advance his own interests or to promote the triumph of a spoils seeking faction. There is not to-day a prominent republican in the United States who has given less evidence of sympathy with the civil service reform movement than has James G. Blaine—or one who depends so much upon the arts of political management to carry his points as does he. Compared with Blaine, Arthur is a saint and martyr of reform.

The Kansas City Times complains because the board of assessment of Missouri persists in estimating railroad property at about one-fifth of the value which its owners attach to the paper which represents its par value. But Missouri is not alone a sufferer from the distinctions in favor of the great transportation corporations, and the Times is not alone in protesting. The New York World says: "The taxes of the New York Central and Hudson River railroad and of all Mr. Vanderbilt's other roads have been paid. This probably is for the purpose of preventing public attention being directed to the scandalously insufficient assessments of these profitable monopolies. The total taxes assessed on the Vanderbilt roads are: On New York Central, $17,426; on New York Central and Hudson river, $5 437; on New York and New Haven, $690, and on New York and Harlem, $33,631. Thus the Vanderbilt corporations pay in all a gross tax of $57,184 to the city, while the tax of the Erie is $119,752. The roads which are thus scandalously favored not only cheat the city out of taxes justly due from them, but are constantly looking for new privileges and purchasing legislatures to enact or defeat all laws against the interests of the people."

The total indebtedness of Great Britain at the present time is £725,689,336, or in the currency of the United States about $3,600,000,000. This is considerably more than twice our present debt.

The historic Mr. Flannagan of Texas will be at the Chicago convention this year for Mr. Blaine. At the last convention, it may be remembered, that he was for the offices.

An Extended Popularity. BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES have been before the public many years. For relieving Coughs and Throat trouble they are superior to all other articles. Sold only in boxes.

The Daily Oregonian.

SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 10, 1884.

TRADE AND COMMERCE.

FRIDAY, May 9.

The Oregon brought up a very light freight. Overland receipts are again larger and include 55 csks prunes, 3 cs extract, 30 tubs butter, 300 cs coal oil, 87 pkgs tobacco. Large stocks of hardware, agricultural implements and dry goods come by rail.

PRODUCE RECEIPTS—Past 24 hours: 1885 ctls wheat, 204 bbls flour, 2040 ctls oats, 200 sks potatoes, 215 lbs wool, 65 lbs hides, 73 cs eggs, 3 bxs fruit, 11 bxs butter. Also 6480 ctls wheat, 284 bbls flour, 60,065 lbs wool, 3712 lbs hides, 515 sks flaxseed, from the eastern section.

IMPORTS—Per steamer Oregon from San Francisco: 304 hf 103 bbls 75 bxs 250 sks 4 kgs sugar, 7 bbls 10 kgs 4 cs syrup, 38 cs 117 sks 8 bbls coffee, 211 sks 61 mats rice, 43 bls 200 sks salt, 135 kgs 12 bbls 6 cs pickles, 70 pkgs tea, 173 sks beans, 206 cs canned goods, 1 cs yeast powder, 14 pkgs chocolate, 8 cs sardines, 31 cs paints, 16 cs candles, 25 bbls 4 bls 210 sks meal, 160 tins matches, 3 cs sauce, 7 cs starch, 24 cs crackers, 3 cs beef, 12 cs axle grease, 23 cs sugar lemon, 646 bxs soap, 25 cs extract, 48 bxs soda and sal, 22 cs blue, 6 cs pearl barley, 65 cs baking powder, 6 cs cream tartar, 27 pkgs spice, 20 cs candy, 25 sks nuts, 4 bbls vinegar, 18 sks seed, 2 tcs hams, 4 cs cod, 9 pkgs raisins, 2 hf prunes, 1 cs dates, 1 cs figs, 10 bxs dried peaches, 10 bxs dried apples, 24 cs honey, 31 cs cheese, 19 cs butter, 18 sks potatoes, 27 bxs bananas, 12 cs limes, 55 cs lemons, 357 bxs oranges, 1 bl bags, 450 sks ground barley, 12 kgs nails, 40 sks coal, 5 pkgs tobacco, 26 cs cigars, 1 cs wash powder.

FREIGHTS—Market quiet with some firmness because of the small amount of tonnage on hand. The Itata loads wheat and flour. At San Francisco the last transaction shows a shilling decline from previous business.

WHEAT—The local market shows little of interest, as shippers are indifferent. It is said that some buying has been done at $1 48@1 50 for valley, and this is about the market value. The foreign markets to-day are generally steadier. San Francisco is in larger business, with choice shipping grades doing rather better.

OATS—The same condition of affairs rule as last noted. Sales are slow and hard to make promptly.

FRUITS—California is sending us several varieties of small fruits, but prices are too high for general use.

EGGS—We quote 22½@25c with arrivals free, but hardly above the demand.

The Merchandise Markets.

For the week a fair call has been had, but it is of a decided hand-to-mouth character. Jobbers here consequently share the same feeling and import closely. The interior has but a limited quantity of produce to send forward at this time and is forced into light buying. Leading cereals are sold up close and there can be no considerable movement in valley wools for a month. The eastern section is sending increased quantities, which are not marketed at offering prices. Being between cereal seasons and selling no wool, the interior cannot afford to buy other than sparingly. In sympathy with advices several of the merchandise lines show more or less weakness, although late declines have sent them probably quite as low as consistent. Wool bags are moving quite freely at full prices, 3½ lb weight being mostly inquired for. Grain bags are firm and selling on spot and for July delivery at 8c, or possibly an ⅛ less. The market promises to show a slight improvement in the near future, yet it is in such a position as to cause no fear of important advances. Advices all agree that the salmon run is light and that the April pack was not important. The present month is confidently expected to show an increase in the run, and consequently a larger uppnt. Sales for export are slow, and there has been but a small movement by rail and steamer. The different sailing lines have secured tonnage equaling four good sized vessels to load in May, June and July, at cheap rates, and this promises to incite shipment. The amount so far contracted is considered to be unusually small, because of low prices offered. Agricultural implements are in large receipt, although the distribution is yet small. Boots and shoes are believed to be tending up. Cement is in excessive stock with a call far from good. Large coast stocks of coffee depress values. Canned goods stocks are broken, but the lateness of the season causes weak values to rule. Molasses and syrup are both seeing low prices. China rice is in large stock but steady, while Island is firm. Stocks of teas are larger. We note an advance in colored beans.

BEANS—Small whites, 3½c; pinks and bayos, 3¾c, butter, 5c.

BREAD, ETC.—We quote: Ship, 3½c; pilot, 3¾c; extra pilot, 4½c; soda crackers, 5@6c; bananas, 13½c.

PICKLES—Kegs quoted at $1 25@1 40.

COFFEE—Costa Rica, 12½@13½c; San Salvador and Guatemala, 11½@12½; Java, best, 20c.

CANNED GOODS—Jobbers quote: Corn, $1 60; tomatoes, 2½s, $1 65; 3s, $4 50; pie peaches, $2@2 25; table peaches, $2 50@2 75; assorted table fruits, $2 75; assorted pie fruits, 2½s, $1 75; gallons, $4 50.

RICE—China mixed, $4 50@4 75; Island, $5 25.

COAL OIL—Best brands, 26c; others, 17@22c.

SALT—Liverpool fine, $16, $20 and $22 50 as to size of bags; half ground coast, $10.

SUGARS—Quotations are: (A) patent cube, 10c; (A) crushed, 10c; dry granulated, 9⅝c; extra golden C, 8⅝c; golden C, 8½c; D, in barrels, 7c; extra powdered, 10c. Quotations are for barrels—halves and boxes, ¼@⅜c advance.

WOOL BAGS—We quote: 3½ lbs, 40c; 4 lbs, 42½c; fleece twine, 10c; sewing, 30@35c.

SALEM NOTES.

SALEM, May 9.

Governor Moody started this morning on a business trip to The Dalles.

Mrs. J. B. Alexander of Eugene City has been visiting friends in this city.

Hon. and Mrs. W. P. Lord left for Ashland this morning on a flying pleasure trip.

Mr. A. R. Flint and his daughter, Mrs. R. H. Dearborn, have started east on a visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hirsch are expected here tomorrow on a brief visit among friends.

Melville Livingston of Douglas county, has recently been committed to the insane asylum.

Hon. A. Coolidge of Silverton, will leave for the eastern states on the excursion train of the 15th inst.

R. O. Corbaley, representing the publishing house of A. L. Bancroft & Co. of San Francisco, is doing the city.

Albert N. Moores and Mrs. I. R. Moores of this city leave for a trip to the eastern states on or about the 19th inst.

Harris' Nickel Plated circus and menagerie is advertised to appear here on Tuesday next, and the small boy is correspondingly jubilant.

The printers of this city will hold a meeting at Waite's job office on Saturday evening next to make arrangements for their annual picnic.

H. H. Hendricks, city editor of the Statesman, and Mr. Hemingway of the Talk have resigned their respective positions. Mr. Hendricks has commenced the study of law and Mr. Hemingway has returned to Portland.

William B. Stout and W. S. Hufford of Newport, John G. Crane of Portland, and James A. Sterling of Drain have been appointed notaries public, and L. B. Burtenshaw of Colfax, a commissioner for Oregon.

The new telephone company are putting up their lines throughout the city, having located their central office at the office of the Western Union Telegraph Company. They will be in working operation in a very few days.

His excellency, the governor, has called a special election for state senator to fill the vacancy caused by the recent resignation of Hon. E. Jessup of Yamhill county, said election to take place at the same time of the general election in June.

Hon. C. E. Moor, superintendent of the Oregon institute for the education of the blind, will, on the 15th inst., start for his old home in Vermont after an absence of over thirty years. He will, during his sojourn east, visit several of the leading blind asylums to witness their workings with the view of introducing new features in our own institution.

A very pleasant reception was tendered Rev. M. L. Rugg, the new Baptist minister, at the residence of Mr and Mrs. G. C. Litchfield on Tuesday evening last. Their elegant house being literally filled with friends and members of the church. The affair was social and homelike throughout and will be long remembered by every one present as one of the most enjoyable events of the season.

Requisitions were issued yesterday upon the governor of Nevada for the arrest of Ed. Prescott, Milt. Prescott, Bert Prescott and Alex Steel, charged with larceny in Baker county, and who recently broke jail in Baker City. Captain W. W. Travillion and William Harper were appointed agents of the state to receive and convey them back to their old quarters, the papers being issued on condition that no expense should accrue against the state of Oregon on account thereof.

The preliminary examination of the murderers of David Swarts has attracted the attention of our citizens generally during the last few days. It was certainly one of the most brutal and deliberate crimes that has occurred here for years. Family feuds and domestic quarrels culminated in the murder of one of the principals and jeopardizes the life and liberty of several more. Mrs. Swarts appears to have urged them on, Mr. Henry to have managed the details and the negro Drake to have committed the deed, the man Henry really never for a moment supposing that his own or Mrs. Swarts' implication would prove criminal. Mrs. Henry even appears to have been cognizant of the crime and in her testimony yesterday showed more than a casual knowledge of preliminary steps. Taken altogether it has thus far proven a brutal murder, bunglingly committed and instead of being concealed has been confessed by nearly every one suspected of complicity in the crime.

There are only 13,402 newspapers in the United States. This condition of things will not be permitted to exist long. Somebody in each of the suffering districts will supply the want before many years elapse.

Analysis by Dr. A. Voelcker, F. R. S., Consulting Chemist Royal Agricultural Society, England, shows only a trace of nitrates in Blackwell's Bull Durham Tobacco. The soil of the Golden Belt of North Carolina, in which this tobacco is grown, don't supply nitrates to the leaf. That is the secret of its delicious mildness. Nothing so pure and luxurious for smoking. Don't forget the brand. None genuine without the trade-mark of the Bull. All dealers have it.

When fellow concerts drive away sleep, smoke Blackwell's Bull Durham Smoking Tobacco.

DR. PAUL M. BRENAN

IS THE MOST SUCCESSFUL PHYSICIAN ON the Pacific coast in the treatment of all Chronic and Difficult Diseases of the Sexual Organs.

He will guarantee to cure any form of disease of the generative organs or private disease, if the patient follows his advice and treatment.

He has become an expert in the treatment of disease, weakness and derangement of the reproductive organs of both male and female, including diseases caused by the FOLLIES OF YOUTH, such as Spermatorrhœa, or Seminal Weakness, or Loss of Perfect Vitality. Nearly two-thirds of all the chronic diseases spring either directly or indirectly from some derangement of the sexual system, and yet this subject is neglected by a majority of the Medical Profession.

Persons afflicted by any form of sexual disease or weakness often delay in calling upon the proper physician in time, from a sense of modesty and sometimes from ignorance, and permit those diseases to exist until their constitution becomes corrupted, their organization broken down, and the hope of future happiness blighted, until death becomes a welcome messenger to carry them out of their miserable existence. Everything strictly confidential under all circumstances. Lost manhood perfectly restored.

Catarrh, Bronchitis, Throat Diseases, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint and all diseases of the Eye and Ear, Stomach and Bladder, he can cure without fail, if they are curable, and if not, he will tell you so.

Consultation Free, and a list of printed questions sent to those living at a distance who cannot consult him personally. Enclose postage stamp for list.

POISON

In the blood is apt to show itself in the Spring, and nature should by all means be assisted in throwing it off. Swift's Specific does this effectually. It is a purely vegetable, non-poisonous remedy, which helps nature to force all the poison or taint out through the pores of the skin.

Mr. Robert A. Easley, of Dickson, Tenn., writes, under date March 10, 1884: "I had chills and fever, followed by rheumatism, for three years, so that I was not able to attend to my business, and tried almost every kind of medicine and found no relief. A friend recommended Swift's Specific. I tried one bottle and my health began to improve. I continued until I had taken six bottles, and it has set me on my feet, as sound and well as ever. I recommend it to all similarly afflicted."

Letters from twenty-three (23) of the leading retail druggists of Atlanta say, under date March 24, 1884: "We sell more of Swift's Specific than any other one remedy, and three to ten times as much as any other blood medicine. We sell it to all classes, and many of the best families use it as a general health tonic."

I am sure that Swift's Specific saved my life. I was terribly poisoned with malaria, and was given up to die. Swift's Specific relieved me promptly and entirely. [illegible] Supt. Gas Works, Rome, Ga.

I have known and used Swift's Specific for more than twenty years, and have seen more wonderful results from its use than from any remedy in or out of the Pharmacopœia. It is a certain and safe antidote to all sorts of Blood Poison. DICKSON SMITH, M. D., Atlanta, Ga.

Lively Times at Eagle City Over Claims—Defending Locations with Shotguns.

EAGLE CITY, Jan. 29.

I left Portland on the 13th instant, came to Rathdrum; found out I could not get through that route. Then I went to Trout creek, made a "toboggan," bought some grub and started for the mines. I was four days making the trip of thirty-five miles. I think it is the roughest trip of my life, but it is the only trail to get in here now. They are charging $30 per 100 pounds on sleds. I think there were over 200 men on the trail. When I reached Eagle City I found the town all armed with pistols and shotguns and excited over a lot of men jumping the streets. The proprietor of the Pioneer store called out for the pioneers to fall in. He led the squad. They charged the party and pulled up the stakes. One man was shot, and Henry Marshall of Portland was struck on the head with a revolver. The pioneers swear they will run the town or die. There were several other fights to-day. Plenty of work at from $4 to $5 per day building log houses. I should think there were fifty houses going up. Notices are posted everywhere "Men Wanted." Come on. Carpenters can get from $5 to $6 per day and plenty of work.

There is about four feet of snow here. I went up the creek to-day. I found most all the claims held by guns. They will say to you "what do you want?" but I could see by their eyes they all meant business. Men are coming in at the rate of about 100 per day. At Trout creek they are shoveling snow all night to build houses. They were fighting over lots there. No trouble to get work here. Men are making the trip from the railroad in one day without a load. I see men here from all over the United States. I saw a copy of THE OREGONIAN sell for seventy-five cents, it was two weeks old.

Later—Two dog trains just landed from the railroad. One toboggan had 500 pounds and was six days on the road. The other had 700 pounds and was eight days. It is all excitement here. The pioneers still hold the town. They will soon have a big killing. I see it in the air.

JAMES WARREN.

BRIEF MENTION.

Last night of Sullivan.

THE DAILY OREGONIAN enters on its twenty-fourth year to-day.

Ed. Farley, the barkeeper, died at St. Vincent's hospital yesterday morning.

Judge Smith has issued a decree of divorce separating May D. Lyons from Patrick D. Lyons.

The Barlow house, in Oregon City, has been purchased by W. P. Stafford, formerly of New Era, Clackamas county.

Do not find fault with large gas bills to-morrow when you can pay them to-day and save a dollar. No discount after to-day.

E. Haight, runner for the International hotel, ran into a hitching post the other day unwittingly, and injured himself severely.

Mrs. Thomas Mann, who had been sick three months, died at her residence, corner of First and Grant streets, Saturday afternoon.

A sawmill, boiler and engine complete has been shipped from this city to the Cœur d'Alene mines by the Portland Lumbering Company.

At a special meeting of the Brunswick club, resolutions of respect to the memory of the late Horace G. Humphrey were unanimously adopted.

Lindsay & Frazier have taken possession of the Gentlemen's Driving Park, two miles north of the city and propose to deal in thoroughbred stock.

The hook and ladder company responded to a still alarm at 8 o'clock Saturday evening for a burning chimney, southwest corner of Fourth and Stark streets.

D. P. Stewart and Philip Rowley, for expressing their opinions of each other too freely in an abusive and profane manner were each fined $10 by Judge Moreland.

Albert Allen has been arraigned in the State circuit court, and has pleaded not guilty to a charge of stealing a diamond ring from C. L. Marshall, in Paul Reichert's saloon.

John O'Neil, who is charged with robbing J. C. L. Miller, a Clackamas county farmer, has been arraigned in the state circuit court and will be brought up again to-morrow morning to plead.

The papers in the suit of D. E. Budd vs. The Multnomah Street Railway company have at last been served, the president of the company, E. J. Jeffrey, having returned from southern Oregon.

The petition for another mail service between this city and East Portland, and for the establishment of a foreign money order department at the East Portland office, has been forwarded to Washington signed by over 200 names.

J. P. Dapfer, who was arrested upon a charge of having robbed his employer, Frederick Hesse, the blacksmith near the First street bridge, has been released, the grand jury not finding sufficient evidence against him to warrant them in returning an indictment.

Henry Davenport has discovered a bed of potter's clay upon his farm on Carter's hill, from which he has had several cups baked as an experiment. The trial is a success, for the cups give forth a clear metallic ring and appear to be of a fine quality. Experts say this clay is the best ever discovered on this coast.

The auction sale of pews in the First Congregational church to-morrow evening will commence at precisely 8 o'clock. There will be an opportunity of purchasing sections of pews and single sittings. Those who are unable to be present may commission Mr. F. K. Arnold to act for them. The auditorium will be heated and made comfortable.

AMUSEMENTS.

MINSTRELS THIS WEEK.—Courtright & Hawkins' minstrels, who were here last summer, will visit Portland for a short season this week and open at New Market Thursday evening. The company consists of twenty-two people, and leaves San Francisco by to-day's steamer. Among the attractions not usual with minstrel performances are Muldoon, the wrestler, in Roman statuary, and Bobby Gaylor, one of the funniest Irish song and dance men who ever convulsed an audience. The quartette is made up of Messrs. Dixon, Wyatt, Holland and Weller. Billy Courtland, always a favorite, and Charles Cogill are on the ends.

PERSONAL.

Joseph Corcoran, business manager of Courtright & Hawkins' minstrels, is in the city.

John Sommerville left by the Atlantic express yesterday evening for eastern Washington territory, where he is largely engaged in the cattle business.

BAKER COUNTY NOTES.

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

BAKER CITY, Jan. 29.

Mails are very irregular. Papers come two or three at a time.

The new national bank building is about completed and will be occupied in a few days.

The democrats perfected the organization of their campaign club this evening by electing Hon. W. C. Hindman president, L. B. Baker secretary and J. T. Donelly assistant secretary.

It is reported that the surveyors of the Oregon Short Line have again started down Snake river, and another party started recently at Ontario and is trying to find a pass through Grant county to connect with the Yaquina road.

For several years the cattle men of Burnt river have been annoyed by thieves and suspicion has rested on the Prescott boys and others. To-day the sheriff and his deputies brought in seven of them on a warrant sworn out yesterday before the justice of the peace. Their examination will be held to-morrow.

THE MISSING PACKAGE.—Later reports of the $19,000 package missing from the Northern Pacific Express Company's safe at Ainsworth do not confirm the suspicion that E. E. Johnson, the agent, made away with it. When Johnson was arrested he had very little money on his person. An explanation of the $1000 gold note referred to in the first account of the loss was given to an OREGONIAN reporter yesterday by a railroad man formerly engaged in and about Ainsworth. It is a counterfeit bill which has drifted around in every saloon and house of ill fame between Ainsworth and Colfax, and has been in the possession of a hundred different men and women. Johnson, who was probably in liquor, offered the bill in a saloon in mere sport. So far as the officers of the company here, and Ladd & Tilton know, neither the missing package nor any trace of it has been found. The theory is advanced that when Johnson left Ainsworth, he did not close the combination of the safe and some one else abstracted the package.

TILL TAPPED.—Saturday night, about 9 o'clock, the Mint saloon, on Front street near Oak, owned by L. Sechton, was robbed of $40. While the barkeeper was sitting in the rear of the saloon, warming his shins, a sneak thief entered the side door, crept behind the bar, took out the till, laid it on the floor and then emptied it. When the barkeeper came out to wait on a customer who stepped in he discovered the loss. He has no clue to the thief, but is convinced that no gentleman took the money.

CROCKERY IMPORTATIONS.

The ship Chas. Cotesworth, from Liverpool, which came so near being lost on Clatsop Spit, brought a large invoice of crockery for Hegele, Crowell & Co. of this city. Two other vessels, the Jorsalfarer and Itata, en route to Portland, also have European goods for this firm. Hegele, Crowell & Co. are rapidly building up a prosperous business.

Sale Postponed.

The sale of Brown's restaurant, which was advertised to take place on Saturday, was postponed until to-day at 2 o'clock P. M., at which time the restaurant will be sold at auction by the sheriff. This is a rare chance to purchase a new and finely furnished restaurant and one of the best stands for business in the city. The sale will take place at 2 o'clock to-day at the restaurant, Nos. 33 and 35 Pine street.

The Agricultural Insurance Co. of Watertown, N. Y., has been added to the list of insurance companies privileged to transact business in this state, having made the required deposit of $50,000. The choice of agent has fallen to Mr. Henry Dobinson—a good selection for both the company and the insuring public.

WARNING IN ADVANCE.

Certain Concealed Danger Brought to Light in the Experience of a Well-Known Man.

Chicago Journal.

If the men, women and children of America could see the danger that is lurking around them each day and on every side the most courageous would lose heart, appetite and sleep. Air, even in the most open localities, is loaded with poison. Water is liable to contain animal matter that will develop and grow after being taken into the system. Food is almost certain to be adulterated; while accidents are always imminent. It is perhaps a merciful provision that few of these things are seen and fewer realized, but their danger is all the greater for this very reason. Most people who read these lines are almost certainly on the threshold of what may be a serious, possibly a fatal, danger. The forces that go to make life may be snapped instantly or by gradual degrees. The greatest dangers are often the most silent and least observed and no one can afford to neglect even their slightest appearance.

These truths were strikingly illustrated in the experience of a gentleman well known to most of the American public, Mr. W. J. Ferguson, who in the play, "A Friendly Tip," under the management of Mr. W. W. Kelley, has been making such a pronounced success, is, perhaps, the best light comedian on the stage. He is a gentleman of slight build, possessing a grace of manner and modulation of voice specially attractive because of its rarity. He has worked hard and conscientiously in the past and his success is the result of merit and labor. But for a number of years, and, indeed, up to a comparatively short time, Mr. Ferguson was most mysteriously afflicted, so much so that he refused numerous tempting offers to travel through the country as far as California and played only in New York and vicinity. Speaking to a representative of this paper upon the subject he said:

"I was conscious that something was silently but surely working against my life. At times I would feel shooting pains in my extremities, and then again my muscles and joints would fairly throb with agony. I was feverish, uneasy and lost my ambition and interest in life. These troubles grew until what were at first minor pains and annoyances became actual burdens of agony. It seemed as though I could feel the disease growing and creeping to every portion of my body. If I had been careful in the beginning I might, perhaps, have overcome what afterwards became so serious, but, like everybody else, afflicted as I was, I neglected the first indications. At last I became so bad that I could not leave the house and was confined to my bed a good portion of the time, and, of course, under the immediate care of physicians. They evidently did all they could for me, and, in fact, did everything except relieve me."

"That, certainly, is no uncommon thing," said the reporter, "but it is evident you have been relieved, and I have some curiosity to know how."

"Well, during the time of my sickness I received very many calls from friends, and, among others, from one who was fully able to sympathize with me as he had been through a similar experience to the one I was then enduring. He described his case minutely, and not only insisted upon my trying the same remedy that cured him, but actually went out and purchased some of it and administered it with his own hands. I did not notice any special effect for several days, but I soon saw that it was benefiting me, and within a fortnight I was able to leave the house. I felt that exercise would be a good thing for me, and so took a walk each day and found my strength increasing constantly, so much so that I walked entirely across the Brooklyn bridge on the first day it was opened, being really the first foot passenger that crossed that structure, all of which I was enabled to do by means of Warner's Safe Rheumatic Cure, which restored me to perfect health and keeps me in excellent and proper condition to-day."

"And was the 'friendly tip' your friend gave you when you were sick in the form of Warner's Safe Rheumatic cure what inspired the name of the play you are now starring in?"

"No, I can hardly say it was, although I really know of no more 'friendly tip' that I could give the public than to cordially advise them in their suffering to use the same remedy that lifted me from the depths of rheumatic agony."

It has been estimated from careful statistics that there are no less than four millions of people in America who are suffering at this season of the year from some form of rheumatic difficulty. Why they will do so when it can largely be avoided seems a very great mystery.

DENIAL FROM MR. WINTON.

ASTORIA, January 31, 1884.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

In your issue of to-day, I saw a local item stating that I am charged with obtaining money from certain parties in this city, in order to "fix" Mr. McBride the district attorney in some criminal cases. Allow me to say most emphatically, that if such charges are made, they are false. The assertion that Mr. C. W. Fulton is my partner is just as true as the balance of the statement, and that is also false.

F. D. WINTON.

[The item should have said that Mr. Fulton was associate counsel of Mr. Winton in the case referred to, not his partner. All the papers relating to the alleged unprofessional conduct have been filed with the supreme court. This journal has no desire to injure Mr. Winton, and gladly gives publicity to his sweeping denial.]

MAIL TO THE MINES.

CŒUR D'ALENE, I. T., Jan. 30.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

In your paper the 28th ult. is this item: "The mail rider between Cœur d'Alene mines and the Mission charges 50 cents for each letter carried. Twenty and even fifty letters a trip is a common thing."

The mail carrier came in from the mines last night, bringing 180 letters from the mines, and left this afternoon with 321 letters for the mines, and quite a large amount of papers besides. He carries the mail on his back and walks the entire distance. He only charges 50 cents per letter to those who do not subscribe to the purse made up for him for carrying the mail.

MILES M. MILLER,
Deputy Postmaster.

New Hardware Firm.

R. C. Dale & Co., who have been established some months at 151 Third street, announce in another column the fact of their closing out their business to Messrs. Wilcox & Buchanan. These gentlemen bring considerable experience with them, Mr. F. R. Wilcox having had ten years' acquaintance with the trade in the eastern states and several years here, being formerly with Thompson, DeHart & Co., and until recently at the house of Dayton, Hall & Lamberson. He enjoys an extended acquaintance throughout Oregon and the territories, and is fortunate in his association with Captain D. E. Buchanan, who has been a resident of Oregon for twenty-five years past. The latter is a thorough mechanic, which is a great aid to him in business of the character he will in future be engaged in. The new firm will add at once to their stock of builders and shelf hardware and at all times keep a full assortment. They look forward to improvements which will be noticed from time to time.

An Immense Establishment.

E. Wineburgh & Co. have leased the building adjoining theirs on First street and will open in a short time one of the finest clothing and furnishing goods stores in this city. In order to make room for the extensive alterations, cutting arches, etc., they have made a genuine reduction throughout their store, and we advise our readers in search of dry goods or clothing to give them a call.

To-day for the Ladies.

The stock of shoes, French and American makes, will be arranged by Wiberg & Holtabaugh especially for the inspection of the ladies, who will be permitted to buy at cost for this day only.

Arrival of Sullivan, "Champion of the World."

GREETED AT THE DOCK BY A GREAT CROWD.

Interesting Exhibition with Soft Gloves at New Market Theater Last Night—A Packed House.

From the Sunday Oregonian.

The John L. Sullivan combination arrived here by the Fleetwood from Astoria at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A large crowd collected at the dock, foot of Morrison street, to receive him, among which was nearly every sporting man in the city, many of whom had been waiting for two hours to witness the landing of the champion and his hard-hitting companions. A number of policemen were on hand, who succeeded in clearing a passage to the Esmond, where they put up.

As soon as Sullivan appeared there were cries of "Here he is" and cheers, and great crowding and pushing was done in order to get a look at him. Sullivan pulled his hat down over his eyes and seemed desirous of avoiding observation as much as possible. Close behind him came the gigantic Maori, Slade, and the rest of the company, who were soon sheltered in the Esmond with policemen at the doors to keep the crowd out. The boxers retired to their rooms immediately after registering their names and reporters and other callers were received by Al F. Smith, manager of the combination. Crowds kept hanging around the hotel all afternoon anxious for a peep at the Boston invincible, and the small boy was present in small numbers.

EXHIBITION AT NEW MARKET.

As indicated by the advance sale, every seat in New Market Theater was filled, from gallery to orchestra, and about 300 occupied seats on the stage—by far the best for an exhibition of this character. It was a good-natured, well-behaved audience, quick to catch a good point and as quick to applaud it. Every one seemed to recognize that he came to see only an exhibition, not a prize fight, and no one was disappointed because blood was not drawn nor features bruised. At 8:15 the curtain rose and Frank Moran, master of ceremonies, introduced Mike Gillespie of Boston and Steve Taylor of New York, who were to open the entertainment. They were stripped to the waist and wore light shoes and tights, as did the remainder of the boxers who appeared. They shook hands and went to work in a very business-like manner and rattled in their blows on each other in lively style. Taylor, who was much the larger of the two, appeared to have his attention fully occupied in warding off the blows of his agile opponent, occasionally putting in a blow which seemed to stagger Gillespie. They displayed much agility and skill during the four rounds, in the act of which they warmed up to their work and closed with a display of hard and rapid hitting which called forth loud applause.

Pete McCoy of New York, middle weight champion of America, and Herbert A. Slade, the Maori giant, were next introduced. Slade seemed a giant indeed in comparison to his opponent, who, however, made up for his disparity in size by activity and showered down blows on the buff hide of the Maori like lightning. Slade acted principally on the defense, occasionally putting in a leftander which made McCoy fall back, but seemed chary of using his right. After the first round was ended the reason was apparent as he removed his right glove and Moran adjusted a bandage on one of his fingers, the doing of which caused the giant to wince visibly. The energy and activity of McCoy and the skill displayed by Slade in parrying his blows gained them liberal applause.

For the next set-to Mr. Moran introduced Steve Taylor, and John L. Sullivan, "the champion of the world," who was received with great applause. The secret of Sullivan's wonderful success in defeating every man whom he has ever met was divulged in the first motion with Taylor. He uses his legs as well as his arms. Every muscle from the toe to the hip seems to be a steel spring of high tension. When he attacks he jumps forward on the left foot, as is the custom of base ball pitchers, using his right leg for leverage and hurls himself against his opponent, confident that the force of a blow from the shoulder, augmented by the springing motion and the weight of his ponderous body, can not be resisted. If one can judge by facial expression, he is terribly in earnest. There is not a soft line about his features—never a shadow of a smile so frequently visible in the other pugilists. To the attacking strength apparently of a wild bull, he has the agility of a cat. Another great advantage is that he makes double use of his left hand. While he puts it out as a guard and keeps his opponent at a long distance, he also uses it to punish and his blows delivered as a sort of push, i. e. without drawing his arm back, seem quite as effective as would a blow from an ordinary strong man of his weight and stature.

Of course, the exhibition between Sullivan and Taylor was too one-sided to be called interesting, though watching the smaller man's efforts to get out of the champion's reach were anything but dull. Still the set-to gave every one an opportunity to judge of Sullivan's splendid physique and of what he could do in the way of fighting if he only had a fight on hand.

The event of the evening so far as display of science in boxing is concerned was the set-to between Mike Gillespie and Pete McCoy. They were very nearly matched in weight and muscle, but McCoy had the advantage in hight and length of reach. He forced the fighting. Gillespie moving cautiously, but returning a good blow for every one he received. Encouraged by applause at each display of skill, either defensive or offensive, the men warmed up and the last three rounds ended with close fighting which had to be broken by the master of ceremonies.

In the last "number" on the programme, viz., the set-to between Sullivan and Slade, there was a second exhibition of the champion's battering powers, differing from the first in this respect. Taylor dodged; Slade was heavy enough and sure enough of his footing to receive the sledge hammer blows, but could not use his right hand effectively.

Throughout the exhibition there was no display of bad temper complained of by the San Francisco papers. At the close Mr. Moran announced that Joe Petty of this city had sent up his card and would meet Pete Taylor on New Market stage Monday night. Mr. Moran also made the customary offer of $1000 to any man who would stand up four rounds before Sullivan, Marquis of Queensbury rules.

THE EAST SIDE.

LOAFER COWHIDED BY A LADY.

Among the scum that floated hither on the tide which set in upon the completion of the Northern Pacific was an average specimen of an eastern dude which located in Albina. He claims to be a druggist and well connected in New York, and that he is now awaiting the proper opportunity to proceed to Cœur d'Alene to establish a drug store. He has now been in Albina about three weeks, during which time his principal occupation has been in hanging around H. D. Carrine & Co.'s drug store and accosting young ladies as they pass by, endeavoring to attract attention by coarse flattery and vague innuendo. A special object of his intrusive attentions was Miss Etta Hill, daughter of G. H. Hill, whom he has not only rudely addressed, but persistently followed on several occasions, despite her repeated and emphatic protests. The matter came to a crisis yesterday when, the fellow repeating his insults, the forbearance of the young lady gave place to virtuous indignation and she resolved to cowhide him. Mentioning her determination to her mother, the latter agreed to assist her in the undertaking, while her father readily volunteered to supply them with the best cowhides obtainable in the market, which he did forthwith. Having secured the necessary means of punishment, the ladies proceeded without hesitation to execute their resolution, nor did not stop till they had succeeded to their utmost satisfaction. Entering the drug store, his headquarters, with an escort, the latter kept the proprietor at bay while the ladies administered a severe castigation upon the object for whom it was intended till they grew weary in the attack, leaving him in a pitiable plight, with features so disfigured that his most intimate relations could scarcely recognize him. He has now been given three days in which to leave town, and if he fails to comply with the demand another interesting item may be furnished, in which tar and feathers will figure conspicuously.

LARCENY BY BAILEE.

In the early part of January Charles Galarneau, Jr., borrowed two suits of clothes from one Issachar Bonnett, of this city, and leaving the city soon thereafter, forgot to return them. A warrant was issued for his arrest, and his whereabouts tracked until his return to Portland on Saturday last, when the marshal, being notified of his arrival, succeeded in arresting him. He was forthwith arraigned before Justice Bulloch and held in bonds of $100 to appear for trial this morning. John Fay became responsible for his appearance and he was released.

NUPTIALS.

Miss Babetta Dornheiser, niece of Mr. and Mrs. S. Lowengardt, of this city, and Benjamin Ettleson, of Sprague, W. T., were married last evening at the residence of the bride's relatives above named on Tenth street, between J and K, Rev. A. Rosenspitz of Portland officiating. A number of friends and relatives witnessed the ceremony, and many elegant and useful presents were made. The party subsequently repaired to the Odd Fellows' hall adjacent, where they danced their congratulations till a reasonably late hour.

NOTES.

Officers elect of Lily Lodge, I. O. G. T., were duly installed Saturday evening.

The giving of the contemplated pioneers' party has been deferred till after the masquerade of the city guards on the 11th.

Mr. A. M. Elam and family returned here Saturday from an eastern trip extending about four months, and proceeded hence to their home at Weston.

Hill & Coleman of Albina have bought the business of Leahy & Solis at that place, and also the building formerly occupied by them on the corner of Russel and Goldsmith streets, which, hereafter, the former firm will occupy.

W. D. Prettyman, formerly of Prettyman & Oreilz, has formed a partnership with H. O. Gannack for the purpose of engaging in the hardware business, they have rented the corner store in the Hawthorne brick, which they will occupy forthwith.

The pile-driving necessary to secure a substantial bottom for the southeastern corner of the foundation of the Gully brick, on the corner of J and Fourth streets, was completed Saturday morning. The laying of the stone foundation will commence forthwith.

Persons who want to buy themselves rich will have an opportunity by attending the marshal's sale of property for delinquent street assessments, which takes place at 11 o'clock this morning, said property being located on Fifth street, between the bridge over Sullivan's gulch and Holladay avenue.

Mr. Gaine, who recently had his leg amputated at St. Vincent's hospital, returned to East Portland Saturday, having left the hospital about three weeks since. He formerly made a living by sawing wood here, in which he was assisted by his wife; but his days of wood-sawing are now over, and considering his advanced age as well as his maimed condition, it is hoped some efforts will be made in their behalf.

Messrs. Russ & Shofner, grocers, corner Morrison and Third sts., will remove this week to No. 87 Morrison st., bet Third and Fourth.

On account of ill health Mr. George V. James has resigned the presidency of the Oregon Transfer Company. Mr. John Kiernan has been elected to succeed him.

Stephen Straits, Jr., accidentally shot and killed himself near Prineville last Monday. He was a son of Hon. Stephen Straits, of Polk county, and was engaged to be married in a few days.

Charles H. Heack, THE OREGONIAN carrier at Vancouver for ten years past, has accepted a position in the government printing office, and in future the paper will be carried by Alex. Katser.

The three parties arrested on suspicion of having robbed Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express, near Grant's Pass, a few days since, were, upon examination, discharged from custody, the evidence forthcoming against them not being deemed sufficient to warrant their detention.

An affray occurred at Lafayette Saturday morning, between Dr. Edgar Poppleton of Lafayette and Mr. Rogers, formerly county clerk. They had a quarrel over Poppleton's having foreclosed a mortgage on Rogers' farm, when, it is alleged, the former drew a knife. Rodgers drew his revolver and fired, the bullet striking Poppleton at the side of the neck, inflicting a severe wound. Bystanders interfered and prevented further trouble. No arrests.

A considerable number of people bound for Cœur d'Alene purchase tickets in this city every day. By far the greater number take tickets to Spokane Falls, the route from which place to the mines appears to be the favorite one at present. The route from Spokane is very little longer than from Rathdrum and is continuous. By the time the Cœur d'Alene placers are free from snow there will be more roads centering there than ever led to Rome.

The new national bank at Colfax opens on the first of next week. The officers are M. S. Burrell, president; J. H. Bellinger, vice president; John Bellinger, cashier, and Walter Sparrow, teller.

accumulation of property that will afford steady but small incomes for future generations of any investor's family. In these ways we disregard the wholesome teachings of our grandfathers' days We make more display but enjoy less really solid comfort. A

The locomotive of to-day has undergone but little change in thirty years, as compared with the great changes that have taken place in the equipment of railway cars, both for the carriage of passengers or freight. Forty five years ago the leading locomotive builders of America were Rogers, Ketchum & Grosvenor, whose shops were located at Paterson, N J, the water power of Passaic falls being used to drive the greater part of their machinery This firm received for their work the highest price paid for work of this sort, and, not satisfied with having a colossal fortune for each year's income, kept on increasing their prices until shrewd railway men began to grumble and look elsewhere It was claimed that the Paterson shops of R K & G finished up their work a trifle better than the Norris works, which were located not far from Philadelphia but that was merely a question of elbow-grease Other shops could do as well if they could only get the Rogers' prices for their work The Baldwin works started up in Philadelphia in 1847 and began to make a passenger engine in every way lighter and less cumbersome than the Norris locomotive, with a graceful sort of model more akin to the Paterson style of work At last, in 1850, a new shop branched out at Paterson, being in reality a joint stock company, though standing in the firm name of Danforth, Cooke & Co This new firm soon drew off to itself many of the best employes in the Rogers works, but it had a hard time in getting contracts until 1851, when it turned out a new locomotive called the "Gov Williamson" for the New Jersey Railroad and Transportation Company, now merged into the Pennsylvania Central system. This engine was of 23½ tons weight, and was calculated for general utility, to draw either freight or passenger trains, as occasion demanded The 28-ton engines of the Rogers concern had four driving wheels of six feet in diameter, seemingly designed only for speed, while the new Danforth engine had four drivers of five feet two inches each Her connecting rods were on the inside of the wheels and her eccentrics on the outside, but this was before the general introduction of link motions. Her cylinders were therefore well under the boiler, with the valve chests on the outside and set at an incline. She was very economical and made all the steam required, while the last two engines made for this same company by the Rogers works (the "John Acken" and "J P Jackson") were very hard on fuel through capable of attaining very high speed. But from that day the Rogers works had a divided empire in the railroad world, and now they produce a less number of engines annually than either the Danforth, Baldwin or Amoskeag works

Up to 1847 all the locomotives in America burnt wood in their furnaces, using only oak, maple, ash or chestnut, the tubes of the boilers being much shorter than they are now made It soon became a patent fact that a long boiler with a narrow shell would stand a greater tension of steam than a short boiler with a greater diameter of shell. This gave the engine necessarily a greater length, and the piston stroke could be increased proportionately The only apparent disadvantage was the danger of so long an engine in rounding a curve at a high rate of speed To fire these long boilers well they needed a more inflammable material, and the pine wood growing along the New Jersey roads came into excellent play An engine called the 'Governor Vroom' was built on this long and low principle, and performed prodigies of speed on a very low consumption Like engines were built for Illinois roads, but it was found they were only available on roads where there was an abundance of pine timber to give the desired long flame in the tubes, and the long piston stroke, so valuable in the Vroom, was soon found to have reached its maximum, as it materially lessened the number of revolutions. About 1848 nearly all the coal mines in Pennsylvania had begun to use coal for fuel on their small underground locomotives, but continued to burn wood on all their engines which drew coal to market In 1850 Norris began to make coal-burning engines to fire with anthracite and bituminous coals mixed, and in 1851 the bridge across the Hackensack river was destroyed by fire while nearly all the locomotives were in the roundhouse at Jersey City This obliged the N J R R & T Co to borrow an engine at Philadelphia, the first coal burner I had ever seen She did not weigh over 18 tons, had single drivers like the old 'Ainsworth' and 'Ruckel' at The Dalles, with inside connections, and as she slipped along by you, all you could see was the eccentric going like lightning I shall never forget Number 13, for she made the fastest run between Newark and New Brunswick that had ever been made with four coaches up to that time Railroad men came over from New York to look at her, and the wood-burning engine was henceforth doomed on any road where coal could be procured Instead of opening the door every three minutes and losing as much steam by cold air in the furnaces as went out through the cylinder ports, this engine ran along with banked fires for nearly half an hour at a time The fireman had so much time to spare that the bell-boy became obsolete and was discharged To-day, the wood-burning engine is obsolete along the Atlantic seaboard north of the Virginia boundary, and can only be found in the vastly timbered regions of the far south On the great plains, the discovery of coal in Wyoming has been a great help to the economy of the Union and Central Pacific roads and should coal be discovered in Idaho or Montana, the expenses of the Northern Pacific will be greatly reduced

The question has often been asked, Who built the first locomotive in America? And the answer has almost invariably come back with the name of Peter Cooper, the philanthropist and humanitarian And so far as any resemblance to the locomotive of to-day is concerned, the claim of Cooper is founded on fact. But of Richard Trevethick's having built the first locomotive ever used in the civilized world there can be no reasonable doubt. In 1813, Oliver Evans of Philadelphia wrote a little book in which he made the following prophetic utterances "The time will come when people will travel in stages moved by steam-engines from one city to another almost as fast as birds can fly, fifteen to twenty miles per hour Passing through the air with such velocity, changing scenes in such rapid succession will be the most exhilarating exercise A carriage will set out from Washington in the morning, the passengers will breakfast in Baltimore, dine at Philadelphia and sup at New York the same day The United States will be the first nation to make this discovery and to adopt the system, and her wealth and power will rise to an unparalleled hight. This is even a more remarkable prophecy than that of Erasmus Darwin, who declared

Soon shall thy arm unconquered steam! afar
Drag the slow barge or drive the rapid car

I would repeat the well-known couplet of Mother Shipton, but I fear that it originated in the land of wooden nutmegs and mahogany doughnuts, and that it is an effusion of the fertile brain which devised the Morey letter Prophecy soon realized its fulfillment, for in 1816, when the only locomotive in the world was that of Trevethick, Colonel John C Stevens of Hoboken (the same man who matched Eclipse against Sir Henry for $5000 a side) wrote to Governeur Morris to propose a practicable route for land carriage between Albany and Lake Erie, "the motive power to be a steam engine nearly similar to the one on board the steamer Juliana, now plying between New York and Hoboken, the carriage wheels to be of cast iron, the rims flat with projecting flanges, to fit on the surface of the railways." Colonel Stevens also said that if the Malay pros could run twenty miles per hour in smooth water and with a fair wind, there was no good reason why a locomotive should not be able to run four times as fast on smooth rails. The board of commissioners of internal transportation thought Stevens was visionary, and Morris, who was chairman of the board, urged the now exploded theory that the locomotive would not have sufficient grip on the rails to draw a heavy load. Consequently though Morris offered to make the experiment for $3000, "the thing died a-bornin," as a Missourian would say

Oliver Evans' engine was begun in the same year that Trevethick finished his locomotive, but there was no imitation of the Welshman's invention nor any attempt in that direction. His invention was called the "Orukter Amphibolis," and was a boat set on wheels in such a way that it could be used either on land or in the water. The locomotive of Peter Cooper was called the "Tom Thumb," and had an upright boiler with a smokestack inserted in such a way that the whole structure looked like a great Stoughton bottle. Its engine was a single one working a crank in the hind axle, three inches cylinder by fourteen inches stroke "I got up steam one Saturday night," says Mr Cooper in an interview with a New York Herald reporter published July 9, 1882, "and took out the president of the road for a ride from Baltimore to Ellicott's Mills. I used two old musket barrels for pipes to the boiler and made the copper connections myself We rode out about three miles and came back in a pouring shower of rain, but very much delighted, for it opened up new possibilities for the road. On the following Monday I invited all my friends for a ride, but on going down to the shed where I had left the engine, found that some scamp had chopped off all the copper connections, presumably to sell for old junk but I worked hard all that week, and on the following Monday, took out a party of forty two friends, thirty-six on the car and six on the locomotive It was a great occasion, but it did not seem so important then as it does now We went up an average grade of eighteen feet to the mile and made the passage of thirteen miles in an hour and twelve minutes, returning in fifty-seven minutes. The result of the experiment was that the bonds of the road were sold at once, and the road was a success" M J Latrobe who was one of the invited guests on that occasion, writes in his graceful 'Rambles in America,' the following graphic sentences "The highest speed attained was about eighteen miles an hour, and some gentlemen in the party pulled out their note-books and wrote the names of some connected sentences to prove that at that great velocity it was easily done The Tom Thumb' weighed about a ton, and her wheels were thirty inches in diameter The fuel was a mixture of soft pine wood and anthracite coal, and the smokestack looked like an aggravated putty-blower"

It is hard to say through whose ingenuity the modern tubular boiler has so grown into favor that it has almost superseded the flue boiler of former years. In W H Brown's "History of the First Locomotives in America" he distinctly states that "Tom Thumb" had tubes in the upper part of her boiler which seemed like an anticipation of the multitubular arrangement of George Stephenson, which, a year later, gained him the victory over his competitors at Rainhill Cooper's steamblast, consisted of a pair of forge bellows operated by a belt running over a drum, while Stephenson's exhausted the steam from the cylinders into the stack, just as is done in the locomotives of to-day The first passenger railroad worked in America was done by horse-power on the old Granite road, near Quincy, Mass., constructed for Thomas H Perkins, of Boston, under the immediate supervision of Gridley Bryant, consulting engineer Bryant had studied all the inventions of Stevenson, but his Yankee brain was a hot bed of inventions In one year he had designed the switch, the portable derrick and the eight-wheeled car, all of which are in use to-day, and were first used on the Quincy road His claim to the invention of the movable truck and the eight-wheeled car were disputed by the late Ross Winans, who built in 1835 the first eight wheeled car used on the Baltimore and Ohio road, having patented his invention in December of the previous year Bryant brought a suit which lasted six years and cost him and his friends upwards of $250,000 Winans died worth $20,000,000 while Bryant, in whose favor the case was finally decided, acquired no right to a royalty and never received a copper for his inventions. In 1829 the old Portage road over the Alleghanies imported from England a "grasshopper" locomotive called the "Stourbridge Lion," from the fact of its having a lion's head painted on the front of the machine

Horatio Allen of New York had been sent over to England to get three locomotives built under the supervision of Stephenson, but the great mechanic was too busy, so that the "Stourbridge Lion" was built by Foster, Raswick & Co It reached New York in 1829, and arrived at Honesdale, Pa, on the 6th of August following Horatio Allen designed the first eight wheeled locomotive—the Hercules, weighing nine tons,—ever built in America. Her driving wheels were forty-four inches in diameter and her cylinders 9½ inches The first regular passenger road operated by steam in the United States was the Charleston and Hamburg road in South Carolina Six miles were built the first year, but it was finally completed a distance of 136 miles to the Savannah river The locomotive built for this road was called the "Best Friend," and was built at the old West Point foundry in New York at the foot of Beach street, where so much really good work has been done at one time and another The boiler of this locomotive was exploded by an ignorant negro sitting down on the safety valve to stop the noise of escaping steam and the engineer, Nicholas Darrell, was also severely scalded A new engine was brought down from New York, and, to allay the fears of passengers, the front of the first car was covered with cotton bales We now leave the "solid south" to go north and find the Hudson and Mohawk road starting out on its first trip from Albany to Schenectady The engine was called the DeWitt Clinton, the third one built in the United States for actual service, and her train consisted of two old stage coaches fixed upon railroad trucks David Matthews was engineer and John T Clark conductor of this train In the forward coach were Erastus Corning, Thurlow Weed, John V Lansing John J Boyd, ex-Gov Yates, John Miller, Mr Van Zandt and Billy Winne, the penny postman In the second car were Major Meigs, "Old Hays," the high constable of New York, John Townsend, Lewis Benedict. Joseph Alexander, Mr Dudley and John J Degraff This was the road which has since bloomed out into the New York Central railroad, whose trains leave the New York depot at every hour of the day and night and from which Vanderbilt's dividends alone are three millions of dollars annually The "DeWitt Clinton" had her cylinders aft and was the first locomotive built with a dome over her boiler The motion of her cranks on going ahead was exactly similar to that of a modern locomotive in backing An excellent silhouette picture of this engine and her train can be seen in Brown's book before mentioned, and it was cut by himself M

YELLOWSTONE PARK.

How the Law is Enforced Against Vandals.

Cheyenne Wyo Letter

Colonel C W Stewart, who was commissioned by Governor Hale of Wyoming to go to the Yellowstone park and prosecute the vandalizing tourists and others who were killing game and otherwise destroying the beauties of the national park, returned home to-day, coming direct from the park He gives some interesting information on the enforcement of law in the park, which has recently been the topic of considerable newspaper talk Mr Stewart says the laws are being enforced, and that in the past few weeks over a score of convictions have been made Relic hunting British noblemen have been arrested and punished the same as the trapper who wantonly destroyed game All have been served alike

"What have been the prevailing offenses in the park?"

"Defacing and breaking geyser cones carrying away specimens, killing game and carelessly building forest fires. The object of the existing laws is to preserve the park in a state of nature for all time, and keep intact its unequaled wonders That spirit caused the appointment of a superintendent and ten assistants by the government, and they were so hampered with red tape formalities that they could accomplish but little unless aided in just the way the Wyoming officials are aiding them or, to state the situation correctly, they could accomplish but little except as aids to our officials."

"There has been considerable newspaper talk about these superintendents. Will you explain their duties and manner in which those duties are performed?"

"The superintendent and ten assistants had authority to order any offender out of the park, giving him thirty days in which to go but they had no authority to make arrests if the offender did not go The superintendent could notify the secretary of the interior, who might notify the war department The secretary of war could then notify the commander of the department to send a company of cavalry from the nearest post to escort the offender out of the park Provided all these things were done, and provided the perpetrator of misdemeanors was found by the troops, the system was inoperative, for immediately upon the departure of the troops, the offender or offenders could return, and then the same tedious opeartion would have to be repeated. But all this is changed now The assistant superintendents can not make arrests, but they do report offenses to the justices. Arrests speedily follow Trial and conviction are as speedily assured, and the jail at Evanston settles the case for the culprit. Take, for instance, the case of Buckskin Jim, a notorious desperado, who has long defied the officers He has been ordered out of the park many times, and has made a practise of skipping over into Montana whenever the atmosphere of the park was getting uncomfortable. Our constables rounded him up so quickly that he and everybody else in the country was surprised. He is now in jail at Evanston, and that is the way all offenders are being treated Superintendent Carpenter is delighted with the change, and the assistants are equally jubilant."

A bridge at Lyons, France, has a stone parapet, pierced at intervals for light, forming a passage which plays the part of a gigantic flute. The rush of the air currents through the openings causes the bridge to emit such sounds of music at different parts of its course that "one might believe it haunted by legions of invisible naiads pursuing the passengers with their plaintive melodies"

In this and other countries there are said to be 1000 scientific societies. The two great and leading bodies of such character as to embrace all the scientific men of a nation are the British and American associations for the advancement of science, both of which have met this year on American soil. The British association is 54 years old, the American 33.

AN INDEPENDENT MOVE.

When the sun looked over the Cascade mountains, it found Joseph Reederby more angry than ever For the first time in thirty years, when the sky was clear, Mr Reederby failed to look up and admire anew the shifting shadows and royal glitter of the morning sun on Hood's glorious peak But how can a man be expected to admire even Hood when hardly twelve hours have elapsed since his feelings have been lacerated, his cherished convictions laughed to scorn and his well weighed advice disregarded! For thirty years he had considered himself an important citizen of Twittertown For thirty years his neighbors had sought his advice, and had listened respectfully to his speeches and suggestions in the conventions of his political party He never sought office himself, although he might have been his party's candidate, even for the mayoralty of Twittertown He had his private interests to attend to, his farm, his store, his interest in a steamboat on the Willamette, his share in a flour mill, so he was content to name the candidate At the convention last night a strange thing had happened A man personally repugnant to Mr Reederby, a man who had nothing to recommend him beyond the bare fact that he was president of a private bank and loaned money at an exorbitant rate of interest, had received the nomination in spite of Mr Reederby's earnest protest This candidate for the highest office in the gift of Twittertown was an eastern man, with a name and an accent which savored strongly of 25 per cent

"What" cried Mr Reederby, indignantly at the breakfast table, "is Oregon coming to?" Are the old settlers losing their influence? Is a man who crossed the plains and lived thirty years in the state of no more account than a fellow who has arrived by the last emigrant train? Has that infernal Northern Pacific railroad ruined the pioneers completely?"

Mrs Reederby, a woman who bore the marks of hard work on her hands and arms, and whose complexion had been destroyed by an early dietary of salt pork and sour bread, answered sharply, 'The railroad has ruined you anyway '

Mr Reederby moved uneasily in his big straw bottomed arm chair, but made no direct reply He was comforting himself with the idea that he did not know exactly how his affairs stood But his neighbors knew and so did his wife Months before he had on a visit to Portland, fallen in with one of the solid citizens of the metropolis The noted citizen took Joseph Reederby into his private office and confidently unfolded to his wondering ears a grand scheme—a short cut to splendid wealth The magic word was 'Transcontinental." Had not Villard himself privately assured the solid citizen that Transcontinental was the very best investment in the market? Was not the solid citizen one of Portland's ablest financiers—a man who had begun by grubbing roots and stumps out of First street and ended with a bank account of a million? And when Mr Reederby was privately assured that it was a great favor, enjoyed by only a few, to be let in upon this royal road to wealth, what could he do but cover everything he owned with mortgages and invest it in Transcontinental? When the splendid paper balloon collapsed, Joseph Reederby found himself in the grasp of a Scotch gentleman, who has no more bowels of compassion than his native Grampian hills Sitting at the breakfast table with Mr and Mrs. Reederby was their only daughter, one of the prettiest girls in Oregon When I make this statement no further eulogy is needed, for what state in the union, or in the whole world for that matter, can boast of as handsome girls as are to be found in the Willamette valley? Moreover she was as sensible as she was good looking

"Pa," she said If she had a fault, it was a habit of saying "pa" and "ma," instead of father and mother "Pa, why don't you run for mayor yourself?" Before Villard and his Transcontinental had brought dire calamity to Oregon, Mr Reederby would have scouted the idea, for it is sometimes better to be Warwick than the king, but now a position of trust might strengthen his affairs, and although there is but a small salary attached to the mayoralty of Twittertown, still the office is in many ways desirable.

Then up spoke Mrs Reederby, whose disposition is something similar to Poe's raven, and said, "Your father would stand no chance of getting elected "

Can any man believe that his popularity wanes and waxes with his bank account, or does it? If Mr Blank, the banker, were stripped of all his fortune and put upon the streets without a penny, would he not still be solicited to save his country and have his name put upon the lists of vice-presidents at public gatherings, as before?

Mr Reederby believed he would. He knew he could once have been mayor of Twittertown, and why not now?

"The party will never elect that pawnbroker mayor of Twittertown " he said But the nominations of both parties had been made, and, besides, Mr Reederby, a life-long member of his political party, could never go over to the opposition. The great men east might see things in a different light, because of a personal disappointment but a humble Oregon politician is no such man as that. Clearly, there was nothing for Mr Reederby to do if he wished at this late day to become a candidate, but to inaugurate an independent movement.

"I'll make it warm for the pawnbroker," he said, after having come to this conclusion "I'll see if a thirty years residence in Oregon don't make a man of some little importance. Why I helped pull the stumps out of the ground on which Twittertown is located " In the resolution to become an independent candidate he was encouraged by his handsome daughter Any man who has a pretty daughter 16 years old, commands a certain amount of respect Mrs Reederby discouraged the movement. "You ain't got any money to throw away on politics," said she "politics is worse than Transcontinental " The party lines are sharply drawn in Twittertown A man is either a democrat or a republican, there has never been a third party, certainly no hint of a prohibition movement. Miss Reederby, who read the Portland papers and was well posted, suggested that her father start a prohibition ticket, but the old man shook his head sadly, and both the young lady's lovers pronounced such a movement sheer madness Miss Reederby was obliged, under these circumstances, to abandon the idea, but the incident shows how unfit women are to manage political affairs. A prohibition party might possibly be started in the barroom of a Portland hotel, but not in Twittertown.

Many youths of Twittertown had aspired to the honor of Miss Susy Reederby's hand but they had one by one been eliminated until two alone remained One was rich and one was poor, but the poor man made up in audacity what he lacked in wealth They both came to Mr Reederby's house evening after evening, talked with Susy, listened to her play on the piano and sing—and she could sing very well They scowled at each other sometimes when one managed to monopolize Susy's attention an undue portion of the time But this did not often happen, as they were in the main good natured young fellows and disposed to give each other a chance And Susy, I would like to describe her, and believe I could if I chose, but as I do not choose I will just say she was as comfortable a little beauty as ever travelled over the Oregon & California railroad.

After Mr. Reederby declared his intention of becoming an independent candidate, the music and the idle banter in his parlor grew less and less, and the talk became more and more of a political nature. Howard Hansell, the suitor who was not rich, was loud in his zeal and suggestions. He was a strapping young fellow with a good deal more to say for himself than is becoming to a young man of twenty three

"I tell you what," he said, bringing his huge proportions a good deal nearer Susy than his rival liked to see, "I know of two or three fellows who'll spite for your father, and I know the reason why "

Susy was rather inclined to like this big young man, but being a level headed little girl she never forgot the fact that loud words and broad shoulders don't always provide bread and butter and other necessaries of life

Henry Sims, the rich suitor was a smaller and quieter and older man He took a serious view of the situation and discussed the movement in a matter of fact way "What we want, said he, "is an issue something to lay before the people A candidate has got to have some cause for his existence "

"Cause" cried Mr Reederby hotly, haven't I cause enough when the party puts up that pawnbroking cent per cent, scoundrel I begged the convention to nominate Smith, a clean decent man, but for the first time in twenty years they wouldn't listen to me " he added plaintively "It's all because you invested in Transcontinental " said Mrs Reederby tolefully But Mr Reederby could not believe that his immoderately upright life of thirty years to count for nothing? "Personal merit," said Henry Sims who took a broad view of politics, is hardly enough to go before the people with " "I'll make it a personal matter with some folks if they don't vote the independent ticket," said Howard Hansell, edging still nearer to Susy Susy's admiration was growing every minute for this big fellow who was ready to do battle for her father She believed he would be able to intimidate the whole town of Twittertown, forgetting in her enthusiasm that such methods of electioneering are not allowable in Oregon. But with all her admiration she did not forget that Sims was the man who controlled the campaign funds so she just moved a little away, as she saw an ominous frown on the rich young man's brow It seemed impossible to find a suitable basis for the campaign It was thought at one time that "Oregon for the pioneers," might do, but on discussion this was rejected as likely to offend the many eastern people who came in with the railroad Mr Reederby strongly advocated a war on the pawn broking class, but was overruled because in the first place, his opponent was not a pawnbroker, although it pleased Mr Reederby to so designate him It is true the regular nominee occasionally received diamonds, etc, as collateral for a loan—what son of Israel is capable of withstanding this temptation?—but he was hardly a pawnbroker, and if he had been, I am not sure that it would have been anything to his discredit.

But whether there was an issue or not, Mr Reederby was now fully determined to become mayor of Twittertown if possible The young men who aspired to his daughter's hand were his lieutenants Hansell did most of the talking and Sims supplied the money But it was a fact that Hansell's talking was done chiefly in Mr Reederby's parlor, and in Susy's presence A card was published in the Twittertown Indicator asking the suffrages of his fellow citizens for Mr Joseph Reederby This candidacy was made necessary, the card stated, because of the well known corruption and unreliability of both the old parties. Young Hansell was in favor of inserting a paragraph to the effect that any one voting against Mr Reederby would be held personally accountable His idea was speedily overruled, but he gained somewhat in Susie's estimation for having proposed it, for that young lady was a great admirer of personal prowess. A few words passed between the young men that night as they walked away from Mr. Reederby's

"See here," said Henry Sims "I want you to stop that rot, You know you only get off such stuff in order to make yourself a hero in Susy's eyes "

"And what are you putting up your money for?" asked Hansell Is it because you think the old man can be elected?"

"Well," said Sims, "money is necessary in this campaign "

"And so is talk," responded Hansell

Joseph Reederby had addressed the citizens of Twittertown in his own behalf The meeting was numerously attended but was not enthusiastic Susan noticed that young Hansell did not cheer so loudly in public as she expected he would Mr Reederby thought he made a very good speech and so he did considering the slight foundation he had to build upon His principal grievance was the bad nomination made by his party, a nomination directly contrary to his wishes The Indicator, a violently partisan paper called Mr Reederby a sorehead, and hinted strongly that the citizens of Twittertown would be loth to place at the head of their affairs a man who had so signally mismanaged his own, Dozens of men who had no money to invest in Transcontinental or anything else called Mr Reederby a fool, and those who had money but did not know a Portland banker intimately enough to be taken into his private office wondered how Reederby could have been induced to invest in so transparent a fraud—they always knew better

So time went on and election day drew near The little caucus nightly assembled in Mr Reederby's parlor grew more enthusiastic and hopeful, all except Mrs. Reederby who never failed to throw cold water on the scheme The rest of the town was calm Mr Reederby took it as a good indication that there was no open violent opposition to his candidacy Everybody to whom he spoke, while not actually promising to support him, did not decline

Occasionally doubts as to the warmth of young Hansell's advocacy outside his own parlor, crossed his mind He could nowhere hear of the strenuous efforts in his behalf which that young gentleman professed to be making Sims he knew to be all right, for does not coin always tell its own story? And he had handled Sims' coin "I am a little uneasy about Howard Hansell," he said one morning to Susan who had become his confidant, "I don't hear that he's doing much for us" "If I thought he wasn't he would never come here again and Susan's brown eyes snapped Election day came at last If I only lived in Washington territory where I could be of some use," sighed Susan

"You wouldn't be old enough to vote if you did said Henry Sims.

"I should be able to get in my particular work at the polls if you were there," said that young braggart, Howard Hansell

The day passed away quietly Twittertown is rarely excited about anything If Hansell did any of the effective work he promised, it was done so quietly no one noticed it In fact he was seen very little in the vicinity of the polling place He told Mr Reederby that he had been all day in the outskirts of town, drumming up and sending in voters who otherwise would not have taken the trouble to vote

Mr Reederby himself distributed his tickets, his fellow citizens taking them and folding them carefully, putting them in their pockets Only one individual, considerably the worse for liquor, insulted the independent candidate "What are yez tryin' to do, ye ould spalpeen? Are yez tryin to break up the dimmycratic party wid yer independent movement? Begorra, I've a notion to fetch yez a lick in the name of Andy Jackson" Mr Reederby looked about for his muscular champion Hansell, but that young gentleman was nowhere to be seen Some of the neighbors interposed, however, and led away the enthusiastic democrat to vote Mr Reederby was glad when the poll closed and they began to count the votes For a long time the ballots came from the box pretty evenly divided between the regular republican and democratic nominees At last, when over a hundred had been counted there came one bearing Mr Reederby's name The election officers smiled, winked at each other, and went on counting republican and democratic votes Again there came another for Mr Reederby and that was all Only two votes, the independent movement had failed disastrously Mr Reederby walked home, feeling the sooner the pioneers all died out the better They were no longer appreciated. Susan, when she heard the result, threw herself upon a lounge, burst into tears and refused to be comforted

"only two votes," she cried between her sobs "It's a shame, when I was so sure pa would be elected "

"I knew how it would turn out, said Mrs Reederby, "and," she added seriously, "if women expect to get the right to vote, they mustn't cry when they are beat " But all Susy could say just then was "It's just too mean its horrid."

After a while she stopped crying and asked, "who do you suppose put in those two votes It must have been Howard and Henry "

"No," said Mr Reederby, reflectively "I know for certain who put one of them in and it wasn't either of the young men The other was probably cast by one of them "

There is no harm in a candidate voting for himself so Mr Reederby was the origin of one of his votes But one of the young men had played him false "If I knew which one," he said to himself, "he should never come into the house again, or marry my girl if he were worth a million" The first of the suitors to put in an appearance that evening was Howard Hansell His manner was subdued, for he felt there was trouble ahead Mr Reederby being in no mood to talk, left the room

"What could I do," he said to Susy, "but cast my own vote for your father? I—"

"You voted for pa, did you?" she asked with her head buried in the cushions.

"Certainly I did," he said cheerfully, "and I would have brought up a dozen more or I'd know the reason why, but they hid, skulked away, they knew me."

After the Hansell could only obtain monosyllabic replies from the young lady, and often she did not take the trouble to answer him at all, keeping her face buried in the cushions, for well she knew her eyes and nose were red, and her hair all tumbled It is discouraging to talk to the back of a head, be it ever so pretty, so the young man soon took his departure He had not been long gone before Henry Sims called He was a man of few words and did not attempt much in the way of consolation "I am sorry we were disappointed," he said, "but better luck next time"

"I shall never take an interest in another election she said, dolefully from among the cushions

"My influence is so little," he said deprecatingly, "I could only control my own vote, I and although I made what I thought permanent arrangements with a number of men in this town "

"You voted for pa of course, raising her head a little

"To be sure how else would you think otherwise he said gravely

After this he was as unsuccessful in drawing her into conversation as Hansell had been, and being a much less persistent man soon went away In fact, the father, daughter and two lovers were rather dismal that night The only one who appeared to enjoy the situation was Mrs Reederby The next morning Susan said "Pa, you are sure you know who put in one of those votes " "Well I should think so, said Mr Reederby angrily "Must I tell you that I put in one of them myself? I hope there's no harm in that A man can vote for himself if he wants, I suppose I'd give a good deal to know who the other man was who voted for me "

"So would I," said Susy thoughtfully

"I suppose it was either Hansell or Sims I'd like to know which, said Mr Reederby

"They both say they voted for you, said Susy "Then one of them lies," cried her father, "and if I knew which one, he should never set foot inside this house again "

"I should like to know, too," said Susan, with a gleam in her brown eyes "I wouldn't marry him, not if I died for it Pa," she said, after a while, "do you think you could get those tickets again?" Mr Reederby thought he could if they hadn't been destroyed, "but what earthly use can they be except to remind me of what an infernal fool I've been " But Susan said, "Get them if you can and we'll decide which one voted and which one lied " Then she explained that the evening before the election she gave each of her lovers a ticket, and on one she put a little letter S, unnoticed, except upon close scrutiny, on the other was an equally small R The first she gave to Howard Hansell, the second to Henry Sims.

When the proper time came, Mr Reederby had not much difficulty in obtaining possession of his two ballots The elective officers were willing to accommodate to this extent so badly a beaten candidate

"Going to frame them, Reederby?" asked one 'What did they cost apiece " asked another

Together Joseph Reederby and his pretty daughter examined the pieces of paper One of them had no mark upon it "That's mine," said Mr Reederby with disgust. On the other in the left hand corner was a small R "Henry Sims," cried Mr Reederby, greatly relieved

"To think " said Susy, "that after all his talk, Howard Hansell didn't even vote for you

The independent movement failed, but Mr Reederby gained a wealthy young man for a son in law H C S

A NEW ART.

The Dressing of Store Windows Recognized by Business Men

[illegible] Sun

Anyone passing through a shopping quarter can not help noticing the taste and profusion shown in the dressing of shop windows. Colors and fabrics are grouped so as to catch the eye and arrest the attention, and the work shows the hand of an artist

A reporter of the Sun made some inquiries on the subject of the window-dresser of one of our large retail stores

"I cannot say," he observed, "that I have any rules that I adhere to in dressing the store and windows Of course I take care to put such colors together as will harmonize well but in doing so I rely on my taste, and combine such goods as I think look well, without any set of rules on the subject Window dressing is an art I never was taught but acquired from appreciation of color and the incentive the rich stuffs by which I am constantly surrounded give me to display them to the best advantage It is not my province here to dress windows, but I do it because there is no one else who can do it as well Window dressing is an art that cannot be taught I have tried repeatedly to teach it, but have always failed I have trained no less than a dozen young men to this work, so as to relieve me of it, but not one of them ever rose above an assistant If I leave them to themselves and tell them to dress the windows they make a botch of it If I dress a window, say with lace curtains, and my assistant sees me do it, he can do it the same way afterward, but if given a promiscuous lot of stuffs and told to arrange them in the windows, he would be completely at sea "

"Are there not professional window dressers?" was asked

"Yes there are lots of them in New York and in some of our large western cities, but I don't know of any in Baltimore These professional window dressers make a good living at it. Some of them have a list of stores that they dress two or three times a week, and receive a regular salary from each Others are engaged by one only, and are kept simply for this purpose A clerk that can do this will be paid extra. It is strange how few have any taste in this way Out of a thousand salesmen, perhaps only one will display any aptitude for this work. It is just like dress drapery Out of hundreds of dressmakers who can sew neatly, and even trim neatly, very few can drape artistically "

WHAT IT TAKES

"Of course, to make a handsome window display you must have the goods to do it with Rich goods and such as are showy and attract attention are best For rich brocades, evening silks, etc some rich ground must be chosen that will throw them out well It is a habit of mine to show goods as I want to sell them—thus if there is a plain and plaid or embroidered goods that together make up a costume, I will show them that way in the window An abominable habit with some window-dressers is to put stiff paper inside the folds of silks, satins, etc, and set them up in rows in the window, than which nothing can be more ugly The idea with me is to make them look graceful The way goods fall is the best No pins should be used It spoils the goods and makes the effect stiff In all my experience of window dressing I have never spoiled but one piece of goods, and that was a piece of pink satin brocade, which faded from being placed too close to the glass Delicate tints, such as pink and lavender will fade from the reflected light, even when there is no sun directly upon the glass No goods should ever really touch the glass. In summer the heat and in winter the dampness will affect it Windows are rarely dressed with dress goods during hot weather, table linen and napkins, hosiery and lace curtains taking their place Excepting during the dull season, windows are dressed every other day In Europe they are changed every day

"Much of the effect depends upon the window and light Windows cannot be dressed flat, but to look well must be higher at the back than in front Frames or stools are the foundations on which the display is made Sometimes after a window is dressed it looks dull and heavy from the street Then a few laces, handkerchiefs, fans and gloves lighten it up wonderfully There's a good deal of satisfaction in arriving at a beautiful and harmonious result, and one's success in this varies, just as I suppose it is with any work that may be called artistic. I think window dressing is artistic work It might be classed under the head of art decoration '

Sunken Treasures.

Belgravia

The list of treasure lost in the sea would indeed be a long and melancholy one instancing, for example, the Madagascar, from Australia, which, in the early days of the gold fever there, having on board the precious yellow dust in enormous quantity, was never heard of and left not even the faintest clue to speculation as to her fate And in later years the Thunder steamer from Calcutta to China, with some £800,000 worth of silver, destined never to reach the expectant consignees, was supposed to be lying abandoned among the awful sandbanks at the mouth of the Hooghly, but, in spite of many rumors, never to be seen there These are instances out of many of treasures never heard of. The wreck of the Royal Charter steamer from Australia, lost in a frightful gale on the Anglesea coast in October, 1856, with some £800,000 of gold on board, will doubtless occur to the reader's mind, coupled, as it was, with such a lamentable loss of life In this case happily, a great part of the treasure was recovered subsequently, but there is still a fortune left at Moelfra for the unfortunate being who can find it In old days Vigo bay had always an attractive sound to treasure seekers, from the reported wealth on board the Spanish fleet destroyed there by Sir G Rooke in 1702, but the infinite pains, money and patience expended over its recovery have been thrown away, the silver (even if it is there, which is somewhat doubtful) obstinately refusing to make a reappearance in the world.

THE RELIGIOUS PRESS.

RELIGION AND INTELLIGENCE.

"The Jews advanced intelligence," says the American Israelite, "is the sequence of his philosophical religion therefore, the more irreligious he grows the more his average intelligence declines The inherited intelligence and morality sustain the Jewish renegade to the second and sometimes the third generation, then sterile idiocy or immoral instincts follow "

KEEP IN THE LOVE OF GOD

According to the Christian Union, "There is an apostolic injunction to keep ourselves in the love of God, which is significant enough for reflection In view of it, we cannot escape the love of God His love, his benevolence, goes out to every creature It bathes the universe of life as the sun enswathes all in genial embrace The arch fiend himself is not beyond the infinite love of God But there is a special way in which God loves his children There is a love of complacence as well as benevolence—such love as is parental and personal The possession of this in fullness is not, indeed, the believer's hope but it is his joy and peace, his advancement in favor of holiness. Consider the lilies, how they grow They toil not, they fret not, there is no feverish effort They keep themselves in the sunshine—that is all or nearly all their secret What a blessed lesson, if we could only learn it keep yourselves in the love of God

BELIEF OF THE AVERAGE CHURCH

"It is natural," remarks the Independent whether under the Congregational, or Methodist, or Episcopalian, or Unitarian, or Catholic, or Baptist name, to believe that one's own church is most like the ideal. None of us are in the slightest degree peculiar in this respect. We each think that our own churches are just a little closer to the gates of heaven than those of any other name All other peoples and tongues think the same of their churches, and, as they are confident, with equally good reasons Of course every denomination is not where it imagines it is—at the top of the apex. Some one has made a mistake But let us each keep our mouths wide open—let us be sure of that—and ready at every lull in the clamor to insist upon it that we are the very tip-top stone in God's spiritual house, and so of creation—for if we do not keep on reiterating this self-evident fact then the Lord of the house himself may forget where we belong and drop us among the rubbish

CHRISTIAN INTERCOURSE.

The Churchman says "Bishop Wilson observes that 'the want of religious discourse in common conversation is one of the chief causes of the decay of Christian piety ' Certainly, such discourse is not frequent. We should think it would be otherwise Christian truth and practice are accorded the first place of importance in all that concerns the life and destiny of mankind, and so we should think they would be often and prominently spoken of Any great event of current interest, such as a great discovery or invention a notable book or eloquent speech, a battle, a pestilence, a great disaster of any kind, will be the first subject of conversation when two or three meet, and discourse temporarily diverging from it will soon be brought back by the importance of the subject Business men will talk about their trade professional men about their cases, artists about their productions, scholars about their studies, voluptuaries about their meat and drink, mechanics about their shops, and fashionable women about their invitations but professing Christians, in common discourse have nothing to say about their Lord

DRUNKENNESS A CRIME.

It is evident,' says the Churchman, "that society and the law must take one of two attitudes or perhaps the two together, toward the drunkard He is either a criminal or a lunatic and must be dealt with as such It is very likely that in some cases or phases he is one, and in the others the other But, for the most part, we believe that drunkenness is a crime and the drunkard should be treated as a criminal It would in some cases, to be sure, be difficult to draw a line between the two conditions but generally there should not be much trouble Let there be constituted commissioners de [illegible] as is now done de lunatico and let every drunkard be brought before such If he is found responsible, society needs protection from him if not responsible, he needs to be protected from himself In either case the sentence passed upon him should not be terminable by time, but may be suspended when he is apparently recovered or 'during good behavior ' Likewise, like any other criminal or lunatic, the state should provide for his care With such a discipline and the removal of the temptation in the shape of the low dram shops, it would be possible in a generation or two to reduce drunkenness to its lowest terms

PERSIAN CARPETS AND RUGS

Costly Work Done in Peasants Houses—Luxurious Carpets

The far famed rugs and carpets of Persia are largely made by peasants in their homes, and are in reality a sort of needlework United States Consul General Benjamin, at Teheran, has sent to the state department a long account of the business He says there are four leading classes of these carpets—the large-sized, the rugs, the ghileem or knitted goods, and the namads, or felt carpets. Carpets produced in Irak are called pharaghans, and are firmer than other Persian carpets Large-sized carpets must be made to order

"Besides the pharagan carpets," he says, "floors are also carpeted sometimes with fabrics from Kerwanshah, Hawadan and the district of Lauristan Also for this purpose the carpets of Mech Kabad, in Khorassen, are available, although of inferior texture to the pharagan The carpets of Kerwan have the texture fitted to the rough usage required in covering floors but while perhaps, of superior quality to the pharagan, they are always small and proportionately more expensive

"The Persian carpet par excellence is the rug The Persians use these in preference to larger sizes First covering the earth floor with a hasseer or matting of split reeds, they lay over it many rugs, which completely conceal the mat This arrangement, when composed of rugs of harmonious designs, is very rich, while the cost is actually less than if one large carpet were employed instead

"The varieties of Persian rugs are numerous. In some sorts, like the Turkowan, there is a general similarity of design, although no two rugs are altogether identical. But in other classes, such as the rugs of Kerwan Dyochegan or Kurdistan, there is endless variety in design and texture

'A point to be considered is that, while the small carpets of Persia go under the general designation of rugs, it would be a serious mistake to consider them all as merely carpets of small size intended to be trod on by heavy shoes In the first place, Persians, when at home, take off their shoes, and thus a carpet of fine, delicate woof and design will last for ages, and actually improve with use such as this. In the second place, a large proportion of the rugs of Persia, and especially the finer grades, are never intended to be laid on the floor, but to cover divans or tables, or to hang as tapestry and portieres

'This explains the extreme fineness of texture and velvety surface which many of these rugs display, and also accounts for the fringe at the ends Some of the rugs of Kerwan are almost as fine as cashmere shawls. The designs of these rugs were formerly of a large pattern, with a general ground of red, white or some other uniform tint, with borders and details of minute tracery harmonizing with rather than disturbing the general effect These patterns are unquestionably of higher artistic importance, exhibiting a quality designated by artists as breadth

"At present, while there is apparently no difference in texture, there is an evident tendency toward similar designs, which lose much of the effect unless seen with close inspection. Perhaps this is only the result of a reaction from long-established custom, and it must be conceded that the modern designs of Persian rugs are more popular with the average European and American buyer

"The colors formerly employed in the rugs of Persia were imperishable. Rugs 100 years old show no deterioration in tint, but rather a softness such as old paintings assume. The introduction of aniline dyes at one time threatened to ruin the manufacture of textile fabrics in Persia, but the law against the employment of aniline dyes enacted by the Persian government is enforced with rigor

"The namads or felt carpets of Persia, although produced by a process which, perhaps, excludes them from the list of strictly textile fabrics, may yet properly be considered in this report. The namad is made by forming a frame of the thickness intended or excavating a place in the ground floor of the size and depth equivalent to the namad intended The hair is laid in this and beaten with mallets until the original disjointed mass has obtained cohesion and is reduced to the dimensions of the frame. A design of colored threads is beaten into the upper surface, sometimes quite effective. This namad, however, is desirable less for its beauty than the complete sense of comfort which it affords. It is much thicker than other carpets, and the sensation to the tread is luxurious. No carpet has ever been manufactured that is more suitable for the comfort of a sleeping room in winter. Of course, there is [illegible] quality of these namads, but the [illegible] cheaper than the same surface of [illegible] woven in the usual styles. The [illegible] and clumsiness of namads [illegible] prevent their exportation to any [illegible] means of transport are [illegible] quality of namad is made at [illegible] most massive are produced at Yezd [illegible] imagine that the size of the namad [illegible] sarily be limited. But, on the contrary [illegible] ular Parisian carpets rarely equal [illegible] ceed the dimensions of some namads [illegible] mad is more often than the carpet [illegible] cover an entire floor, elegant rugs [illegible] over it in places. I have seen a namad [illegible] five feet long by nearly forty wide [illegible]

"There is one species of rug [illegible] often spoken of, but rarely seen. I [illegible] rugs made of silk. It is not uncommon [illegible] rugs of the finer types with silken [illegible] sometimes with a woof of silk [illegible] the rug But all silk rugs are [illegible] now than formerly. They are [illegible] and intended for luxury rather than [illegible] price is necessarily very high. The [illegible] merchants of Teheran told me of [illegible] seen over a tomb, it was [illegible] vards in size, but he said that [illegible] $860, would be a low price for it."

RULES FOR STAGE [illegible]

Two Captive Highwaymen Reveal [illegible] Tricks of Trade.

The perpetrators of the stage robberies [illegible] vicinity, writes a Cloverdale, California, correspondent of the New York Sun, [illegible] covered in the persons of two young [illegible] than 20 years of age, who embarked in [illegible] iness early in the summer, with the [illegible] living well in the large cities of the [illegible] ring the winter. They are strangers [illegible] of them, Billy Corbett, claiming to [illegible] Francisco, and the other, John Dwyer [illegible] from the east. When the Wells-Fargo [illegible] overhauled them they were preparing [illegible] more raid, which they had agreed [illegible] their last.

"That's what we said, about [illegible] though," said Corbett," after September [illegible] fact is, we did a good deal better than [illegible] pected, and every time we would [illegible] sum we would say, 'Now we will [illegible] fore we got packed up we would agree [illegible] just once more. Now look at us. If [illegible] choked ourselves off we would have [illegible] shape now for fun."

The detectives, who had worked [illegible] case against the boys, learned from [illegible] place where they had hid their [illegible] after a careful search in the [illegible] earthed about $4000 in gold and [illegible] dred dollars in bills. Besides this [illegible] much valuable jewelry, and the boys had [illegible] deal of currency on their persons. [illegible] ing here the detectives got a long [illegible] their prisoners, who regard themselves [illegible] clever thieves. Having made up their [illegible] that they will have to serve out a long [illegible] and that nothing will avail them, [illegible] they are making merry over a bad job.

"The way of it was just this," [illegible] bett. "My partner here and I met in San Fran[illegible] cisco last May, and we agreed on this en[illegible] terprise We saw by the papers [illegible] were being held up in all parts of the [illegible] we concluded to try it. The first one [illegible] was down in the mountains, a [illegible] south of here, and we got nothing [illegible] silver from the driver and some [illegible] He says "See here, you fellers. You[illegible] at the business, and I know it. [illegible] up a stage just you remember also [illegible] 'em to throw off the box. The box [illegible] that's got the dust in. I don't [illegible] any just now, but that's what [illegible] We tried it next time on the Oroville [illegible] so happened that the driver didn't [illegible] and we had to stand the passengers up.

"We made a great reputation [illegible] fact, that is what we were trying [illegible] where. The papers got it all in about [illegible] courteous and gallant. No one ever [illegible] in the line than we did. Down near [illegible] once, when a big fellow hit me across [illegible] with a walking-stick as big as my wrist, [illegible] say anything We simply robbed him [illegible] more thoroughly, taking his coat, [illegible] I've got them now. After we got [illegible] we found things worked a good deal [illegible] We got so we could do up a stage in [illegible] utes from the first yell, and if they'd [illegible] we would have lowered that record [illegible] There's an awful sight for a beginner [illegible] in the business. It makes me mad [illegible] some butcher will be agoing over the [illegible] summer, making bad breaks. What we in[illegible] tended to do was to get away from [illegible] week and go east for the winter. [illegible] summer we intended to come back [illegible] we struck something."

"In the first place, never appear in [illegible] hurry—that is, a nervous hurry. [illegible] bustling about as though it was a very [illegible] able duty that must be attended to [illegible] get scared at all. There is no [illegible] keep your weapons handy and don't [illegible] eye off your victim. 3, remember that [illegible] haul is generally in the treasure box or [illegible] sack, and that neither the driver nor the [illegible] gers care for either of them. [illegible] make themselves obnoxious about [illegible] you may depend upon it. If you [illegible] Don't be too hoggish in going through [illegible] sengers themselves. Just take [illegible] handy and no more. This is a particular [illegible] rule to follow when you have a heavy [illegible] box and a fat mail bag. If you [illegible] ate a passenger he may [illegible] simply relieve him of what [illegible] and don't appear as if you [illegible] needy circumstances yourselves, or [illegible] wanted to bankrupt him, you will [illegible] miration and gratitude. 5. If there [illegible] aboard, assure them the first thing [illegible] will not be disturbed. Make them [illegible] and watch them, of course, for they [illegible] erous, but when you come to them [illegible] just say that you never rob the [illegible] hand them back their things. [illegible] up in the long run. 6. Look out [illegible] every minute you are at the job. [illegible] most harmless looking men I ever [illegible] hardest and heaviest fists. One [illegible] here on the big tree road told me [illegible] sumptive, and five minutes after [illegible] hit me back of the ear, I thought [illegible] fallen on me. 7. Pay no attention to [illegible] He's used to it, and as long as [illegible] shoot he doesn't worry.

"I have met some very sociable [illegible] day that I would like to describe, and [illegible] bother about them now. The [illegible] all these precepts is to do the [illegible] friction, and make no enemies. [illegible] the bag being heavy, you can afford [illegible] on the passengers. If they [illegible] and are well treated, they are [illegible] the experience, and they never [illegible] the details. This makes [illegible] that is, you've got no [illegible] avenger on your trail, except the [illegible] and United States sharps, and [illegible] them after you're used to [illegible] whole pile I've made this summer [illegible] months ago what I know now, [illegible] man would ever have run me down.

"That's all true, every word of [illegible] Corbett. "We learned a good deal [illegible] ing over the mountains. We had [illegible] little recreation, and coming [illegible] stage three big fellows with [illegible] us. My partner and I were on the [illegible] the inside, and as soon as we [illegible] was up, we were very anxious [illegible] did the work. Well, they were [illegible] stood up in a row with the [illegible] when one of them came [illegible] 'I'm a member of the [illegible] it gently so the others would [illegible] he looks at me sharp like, and [illegible] could hear him: 'S that [illegible] preachers" And he handed [illegible] roll of bills which he had [illegible] I rather admired the chap [illegible] it cut me up dreadfully to [illegible] It was all right, though, [illegible] learned a good deal of [illegible]

The detectives have [illegible] with the recovered treasure [illegible] plead guilty.

POETS OF THE DEEP

Who are the poets of the deep? T names may be counted upon the finger
one hand They are Herman Melville,
I rank him first Michael Scott Dana, author of Two Years Before the Ma

Green Hand These men are great their special walk and they are great only because they have interpreted meanings of the ocean and invested ships and calling they write about with spirit of the sea [illegible] as the song of part of her life as she lean before the bl men who have eaten and drank with s hardships of the life whose intimacy w

THE DISHONEST PARTNER

One of the most frequent and deplorab agents of sudden ruin is the dishonest par mutual confidence between those who co commercial man has brought himself with reach of the law we are inclined to dou

if his partner can have been unaware of h malpractices yet it must be obvious th the dishonesty of one partner too ofte arises from the unsuspicious simplicity the other. There are even instances which no amount of sagacity will save men from the enterprises of a roguish par
ner. The following is a very common cas
A and B being partners A dies and his so succeeds to his share of the business

[illegible] and if B has made up his mind to extend the business of the firm by ne methods, now that he is head partner, th junior partner will generally be a mere too in his hands If young A be more fond pleasure than business he will of course b even less than a tool—a mere cipher, and will be left to manage matters as he please until he succeeds in his schemes and pro and brings A to poverty and disgrace It a cruel thing that if B has absconded A wi for his "innocence" But partners hav learned this lesson so often that it is hard to wonder how any sane man can assume re of the public interest that the sudden ru
